Board action: Carmel Valley to benefit from most recent county redistricting map

By SUSAN BECK

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors adopted an urgency ordinance for new supervisorial district boundaries for Monterey County.

The board's unanimous vote, taken at a special meeting held at the Community Hospital of Monterey Peninsula Monday, Dec. 21, also established a schedule for supervisorial election. The ordinance and schedule will be submitted to the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C.

The board's action follows the recommendation of a three-member Redistricting Commission, with District Attorney Dean Flippo, County Assessor Bruce Reeves and County Clerk Ernie Maggini.

It was charged by the county to work out a redistricting plan after a 21-month process that has generated more than 50 maps to reflect the individual needs of the county's population — to no avail.

Federal Judge William Ingram told the board of supervisors that a redistricting map must be approved by the Justice Department by Feb. 26, or he would impose a temporary map in order to have supervisorial elections proceed in June.

After two-and-a-half weeks, the redistricting commission offered up yet another supervisorial map that was designed to accommodate the various concerns throughout the county.

Karin Strasser Kauffman, chair of the board of supervisors, who also represents the 5th District, said that she was grateful to the commission for taking on the job.

In retrospect, a redistricting commission could have been assigned to the task early on, said Strasser Kauffman.

But, when the redistricting process began, she said, there was a tremendous underestimation of the endeavor of providing for one person-one vote, minority representation, community interest, geographic identity and economic realities.

"Now, there is more of a willingness to compromise," said Strasser Kauffman. "We didn't see that before."

One of the ways to reach an acceptable compromise was to change the "deviation," which is the difference between the largest and the smallest districts divided by the ideal district size.

The commission's map incorporates 15.1 percent rather than the board's restrictive 10 percent deviation, which is mandated by a constitutional order requiring one person, one vote.

Scurrying for power: local names seek higher office

By PAUL WOLF

THE EXPECTED flight of Leon Panetta has elicited a rush of ambition from an assortment of local politicians who hope to replace the veteran congressman in the 17th Congressional district.

Like runners at the starting blocks, they are ready for a race but only awaiting the sound of a special election being called.

Not until Panetta is next month confirmed by the U.S. Senate for his position as director of the Office of Management and Budget does his Congressional seat become open.

When it does, the governor has 14 days to call for a special election.

And we are now looking at a lopsided lineup of competitors: only Bill McCampbell, the attorney and consultant from Pebble Beach, is a Republican. The remaining field of four contenders is shaping up to be all Democratic.

The latest entrant is Sam Farr, who last month was elected to a fresh two-year term in his 27th Assembly district.

Another Congressional aspirant is Seaside Mayor Lance McClair, who described himself as "dead serious."

That is not surprising, since Barbara Shipnuck, the long-time supervisor in the 2nd district, is also running for Congress. "Leon Panetta served this district with distinction," she said in a statement, echoing what are becoming universal plaudits for the congressman of 16 years.

"He leaves a legacy of hard work, a willingness to face tough decisions, exceptional constituent service and a real sense of caring — for the people in this district and for our environment," Shipnuck's statement continued.

Meanwhile, the race will include Bill McCampbell, who was outmatched over two votes for every one Panetta earned in last month's election.

He could not be reached at Pine Cone deadline. If he tries to make the jump from assembly to Congress, Karin Strasser Kauffman, the Monterey County supervisor representing the fifth district, may be waiting in the wings.

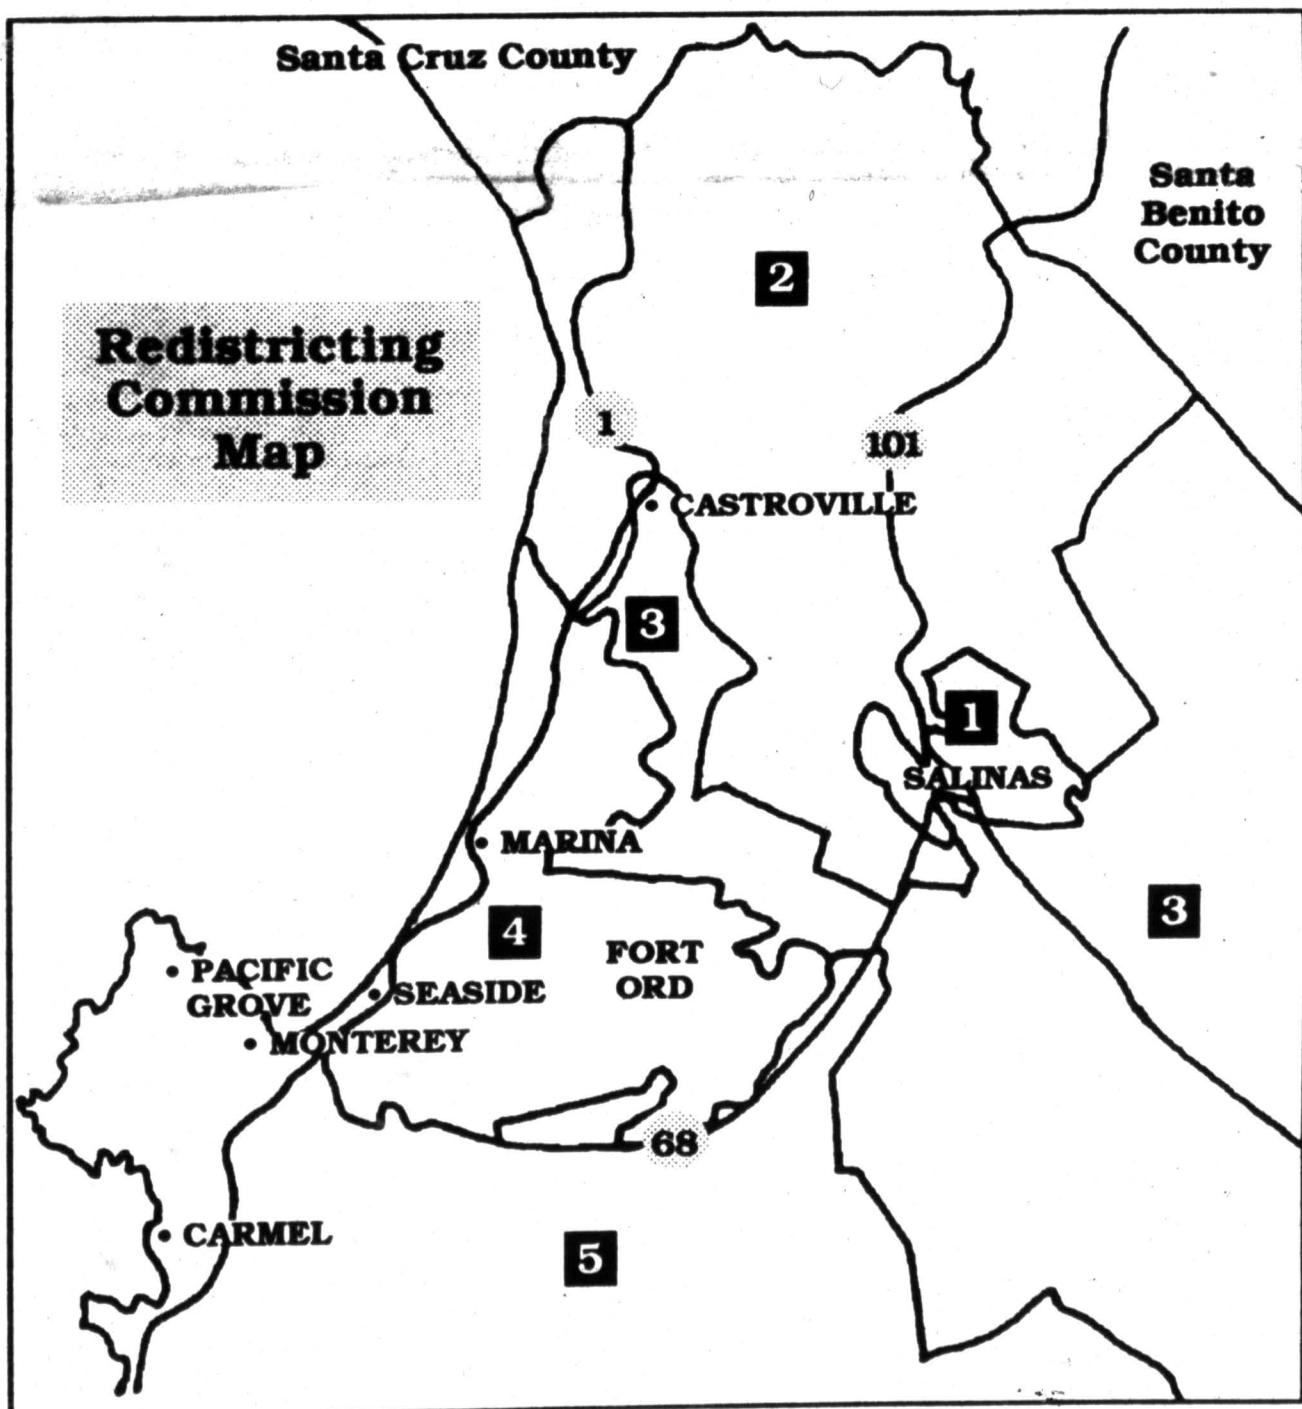

"I've agreed to take a look at my options," she said in a phone interview. "We will examine it, but it would be premature to say."

Moreover, Rusty Arellas of San Jose is also considered a likely contender. So that makes five contenders in all.

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. Letters must not exceed 250 words in length. What is left?

Dear Editor:

My 8-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, had her school Christmas program last night. With a backdrop of Mother Earth and marine mammals swimming in outer space, we proceeded to hear songs about one world and student lectures about not smoking, being careful not to litter and worry that there will be no more world left for these little ones to grow up in. Not one Christmas carol, no word of the Christ child and unless those were the "three wise whales," no thought to the true meaning of Christmas at all.

I lieu of class Christmas parties, the children are celebrating the birth of Beethoven and Charlie Brown and Snoopy.

I don't care what faith you are, the basic premise seems to be love, faith and hope ... the difference between right and wrong. When you remove these ideals, what is left? What happens to children when they begin to feel there is no hope and that life as they know it will cease to exist unless they do something about it! That's a mighty tall order for an 8-year-old.

This Christmas, whatever your faith, be sure your children know you love them, that there is hope, that there are blessings around us daily to be thankful for. Our best gift to a generation beset with violence in the schools, hatred, fear and jealousy is a moral structure that will help each child define their role in the world ... a chance to feel good about themselves ... a chance to know there is more.

From our family to yours, we wish you all a very blessed holiday season.

Pine Cone reporter named finalist

Paul Wolf, Pine Cone city editor and reporter covering Carmel, has been named a finalist in the California Newspaper Publishers Association's "1992 Better Newspaper Contest".

His entry, "Al Gore and Tipper Too," was one of two articles selected by CNPA judges in their annual statewide competition for best newspaper writing among weeklies with a circulation under 10,000, according to Ray A. March, Pine Cone editor.

The article, which appeared in the Sept. 3 issue of The Pine Cone, is a color piece on Gore bringing his informal political campaign to Point Pinos in Pacific Grove.

Announcement of first and second place winners in the best newspaper writing category will be made in February at the CNPA's annual luncheon in San Jose.

Relevant Congressional committees need to take a look at stretching out the current federal debt structure of $4 trillion dollars, most of which is repayable within a five year period, to a longer time frame of 10 to 15 years with a much lower yearly payback. The difference could then be invested in much needed infrastructure projects as well as our rotted out manufacturing base.

Such a policy would not only save grandma from becoming destitute, but it would also save many local bankers throughout the nation who would be pleased to see millions of employed people with paychecks walking through their front doors once again.

A Teppich-sacker Yule

Dear Editor:

Once again upon a time, there was a lovely little hamlet along the American West Coast named Carmel-by-the-Sea. It was a wonderful community where the good burghers, the shopkeepers and the Gummihalsers (translation — rubberneckers) co-existed rather well.

It was usually a peaceful village and most of the good burghers went by a philosophy of live and let live. Last year, there had been a ruckus engendered by certain burghers who did not approve of the method of selecting members of the hamlet's Planning Commission, however, this eventually subsided.

A spirited election in April saw a new

Post office plaza plan to highlight town hall meeting

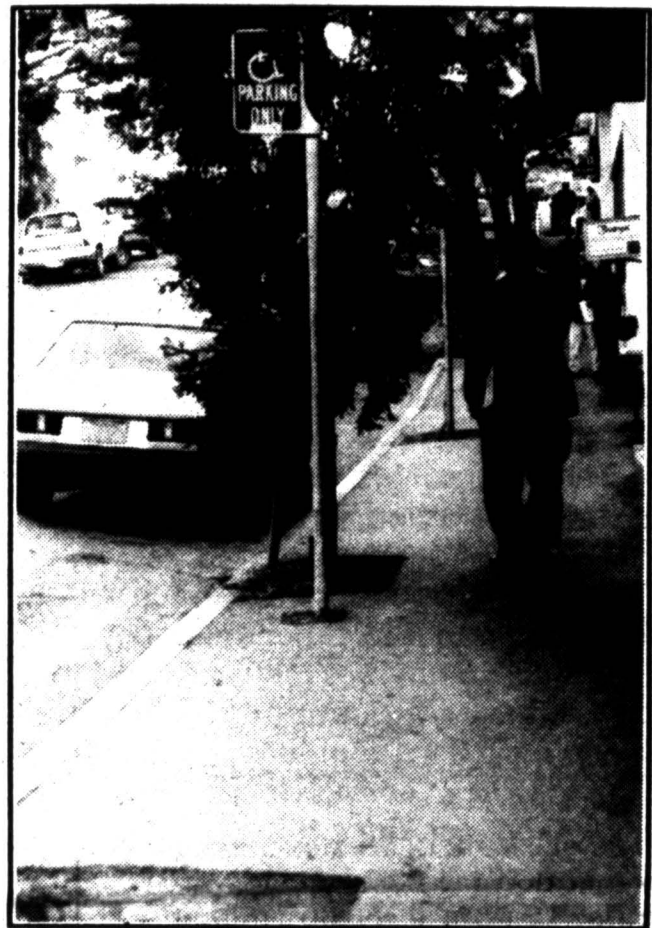

By PAUL WOLF

THE PLAN to turn the sidewalk at the Carmel Post Office into a full-scale plaza will highlight a town hall meeting scheduled for next month.

With the last event deemed a great success, the Carmel City Council is planning a second town hall meeting to allow residents to discuss issues in an informal setting.

The town hall forum held Aug. 17 and orchestrated by Carmel mayor Ken White was meant to launch a new Carmel tradition. It may have done just that.

The next program is scheduled for Monday, Jan. 11. It will begin at 7 p.m. in Carpenter Hall, at the Sunset Community Center.

POST OFFICE SIDEWALK

The Post Office plaza issue will be the subject of a presentation by the Carmel-by-the-Sea 2016 Committee, a diverse task force that has brainstormed what Carmel should look like and provide its residents in the future.

The 15-member committee included the plaza as one of its "visions" for the year that is the committee's namesake: an old-fashioned community plaza, where petitioners and campaigners would not have to step all over each other's toes.

Obvious requirement

While the charm of a European-style plaza may appeal to some, others are ing 5th Avenue, the obvious requirement of widening the sidewalk.

The plaza could eliminate parking or make for traffic safety hazards. Supporters of the project will aim for finding the right plan, one that is both attractive and safe.

According to Public Works Director Jim Cullem, it would be possible to create a plaza by widening the sidewalk by as little as three to four feet. However, there has been talk of broadening the sidewalk to by as much as seven.

The plaza also would likely include wheelchair ramp, located partially in the public right-of-way. This portion, presumably, would be funded by the post office, in accordance with the Americans With Disabilities Act.

The town hall meeting will also include brief presentations by representatives from three tour bus companies.

They will discuss all the latest in tourism — who's coming, how long they are staying, and where they are from. As is the case with all the items at the town hall meeting, there will be plenty of time for a question-and-answer period."

City administrator hunt

In addition, the meeting will include White's status report on the search for a new city administrator. In a two-day period before Pine Cone press time this week, an ad in the League of California Cities publication generated 47 phone calls by interested men and women and hopeful candidates for a job interview. "I don't think we will have a shortage of people applying for this job," White said.

As for the plaza concept, Neal Kruse, 2016 Committee chairman, referred to the post office as "a great social nexus, where people go to regardless...as opposed to a park or some other destination."

Kruse said he hopes to see a task force established to study the feasibility and potential problems associated with the plaza, which may include drainage, parking and traffic.

"This is not a new idea," Kruse added. "But we are hoping to see a task force do a study on the project and see what needs to be done. Actually, I don't know what needs to be done. The task force will find out."

Kruse will come to the meeting equipped with some graphics. "Hopefully they will be colored, something to make it look nice so people can really see it...It's easy to see what will be lost. But we should present a picture of what is pos-

CHS students collect food

VINCE TORRAS, a 1942 graduate of Carmel High School, paid a visit to CHS Friday morning — to pick up over 4,000 pounds of non-perishable foods collected by students during the last three weeks.

"This is the second time we've come to the school," Torras said. "Last week we picked up about 4,000 pounds too," he said.

Torras, who owns a local moving company, donated his truck and time to help the Salvation Army with their annual canned food drive. Several Fort Ord volunteers and students formed an assembly line, loading stacks of food onto the truck.

Carmel High has led the Peninsula in collecting food for the Salvation Army over the past few years, according to Jack Ellena, CHS Community Services Director.

"We're a little under what we collected last year, but it's still outstanding," said Ellena, who is spearheading the effort at Carmel High.

On Dec. 5, about 25 students and 10 parents went door to door soliciting Carmel residents for non-perishable foods, and collected over 1,000 items for the Salvation Army.

Ellena pointed out that students did not receive community service credit for their efforts.

"They're just doing it because they know people need help," he said.

Several CHS teachers offered incentives to their students for participating in the food drive. In Richard Fletcher's Biology class, students who brought in 100 cans of food were exempt from taking the final exam.

Fletcher said not all students raided their parents' cupboards to come up with the minimum requirement.

"Many bought food out of their own pockets to donate," Fletcher said.

"It's a win-win situation," said CHS sophomore Jamie Lawn. "We got to get out of the final, and poor people who need help will get it."

Red Cross volunteers donate garments to needy

By SCOTT BREARTON

IN THE true spirit of Christmas, volunteers for the Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter of the American Red Cross recently delivered dozens of hand-knitted garments to people in need throughout the Monterey Peninsula.

On Dec. 10, residents of the YWCA Battered Women's Shelter were the grateful recipients of children's blankets, slippers and sweaters — all individually gift-wrapped.

Residents of Rippling River, a Carmel Valley apartment complex for disabled and elderly people, were also paid a visit by Red Cross volunteers Dec. 16, receiving knitted lap throws, afghans, and sweaters, just in time for the frosty weather of late.

Bobbi Shudde is chairman of knitting production for the Carmel chapter, responsible for contacting volunteer knitters, determining where the need is greatest, and delivering the items.

Volunteer knitters include Grace Elliott, Raymonde Julian, Deborah Hall, Jane Rose, and Betty Pearson.

According to chapter manager Lynette Balesteri, Carmel volunteer knitters have a long history of making useful garments for others, dating back to World War I.

"The knitting production is a win-win project," Balesteri said. "The knitters have the satisfaction of a job well done, and the recipients receive hand-made items made with lots of love and care."

Volunteer knitters are always needed and welcome, according to Balesteri. The Red Cross supplies the wool. For more information, call the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross at 624-6921.

4. Bring $4 to purchase the permit.

Will harmony be Panetta's legacy to Fort Ord Task Force?

By PAUL WOLF

IN THE brief but rocky history of the Fort Ord Community Task Force, Dec. 11 was something of a quiet landmark, full of significance for the outgoing chairman, Leon Panetta.

"It appears that everyone was acting in great harmony on what may have been Panetta's last meeting," said Carmel Councilwoman Barbara Livingston, describing the task force's most recent Friday meeting chaired by the Congressman.

While Mayor Ken White is Carmel's official representative to the task force, Livingston has been attending some meetings lately just to listen and learn.

Panetta's legacy is the harmony that now exists between the jurisdictions. The region may notice much more common ground today than it ever thought was possible.

Competing interests

The impacts associated with the loss of Fort Ord are minor for Carmel as compared to those of cities like Seaside and Marina. And while slow-growing cities like Pacific Grove and Carmel have often focused on environmental preservation, the economically struggling jurisdictions have stressed jobs and redevelopment.

Conversations with Mayor White and Seaside Mayor Lance McClair suggest there may be much in common after all.

Shared regret

Of course, it all begins with a shared sense of regret — from both mayors — concerning the loss of Panetta's chairmanship. When the Congressman heads for Washington to become director of the Office of Management and Budget for the Clinton Administration (assuming he gets Senate Confirmation), he will leave a power vacuum in the task force.

"We wouldn't be where we are today without Leon Panetta," said White. "He has had the clout and leadership ability. Considering the size of the job and the number of parties that have needed to be dealt with, I think Leon has done an inspiring job."

Similarly, McClair said, "He's developed a lot of influence, power and respect over the past 15 years. Don't expect another Leon Panetta from the next person chairing the task force."

While respecting Panetta and characterizing him as "one of my role models," McClair is ready to move on.

The region, he said, has an opportunity to cultivate local leadership. He said Panetta's successor should be one of the mayors selected by the vote of the task force's representatives.

Whoever becomes the 17th district congressman, McClair said, "should not be chair of the task force. A congressman's role is to use his or her power to facilitate

Proposals for Fort Ord

THESE ARE some of the key uses spelled out by the Fort Ord Reuse Committee listed as possibilities for the army territory.

- A California State University campus, to hold as many as 25,000 student, including residential accommodations.

- A marine research facility, run by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

- An environmental research station.

- An "intermodal" transportation center, for rail and bus lines.

- A civilian airport.

- A regional performing arts center.

- Housing.

- A U.S. Olympic Committee Training Center.

- A national language training center.

- An international trade resource center.

- A peace and fire officers' training facility.

- Large areas designated for parks, recreation and open space.

White has been a strong supporter of a California State university being established on former army territory.

McClair also supports the campus vision, saying, "If it is done well, I am for it."

Meanwhile, White reemphasized the goal of keeping army beach territory from development and available to the public as open space. The city councils Carmel and Pacific Grove have both passed resolutions affirming such a commitment.

McClair found himself in a position of clarifying his own platform. "I am not a beach development. I am a supporter of public access to the shore."

In fact, all the jurisdictions appear committed to keeping new development off the shoreline, much to the relief of town's like Carmel.

Early this year, the City of Seaside had come public with a detailed map — its own brainstorm — depicted a redeveloped Fort Ord. It became a vivid symbol of where the cities part company. The map depicted hotels on the beach, golf courses, a mini-Disneyland, industry and corporate headquarters.

The Fort Ord Reuse Group, which has set forth a tentative list of uses, still to be finalized, has not included these kinds of uses as even possibilities.

The reuse group is composed of five cities and the county. Carmel, incidentally, is not part of that group.

Two-way perception

There is sometimes an unfortunate two-way perception: Towns like Carmel and Pacific Grove want it known that what happens at Fort Ord is their business; And then, as McClair explained, Seaside wants it known that it is thinking of the whole region, not just of itself, as it has been accused.

Panetta inevitably gets much credit for narrowing the differences between the communities. His instructions to the task force are to continue building consensus. Even without him around, there may have been enough momentum built up for the task force to do so.

For example, if every district has a population of 25,000 people, the district boundaries may be drawn up in such a way that one district will have 22,500 or another may have 27,500 people.

Flippo stated earlier that it is legally possible to bend the 10 percent deviation rule so that Latino concerns are included in reorganizing districts.

Douglas Holland, county council, said the higher deviation reflected in the commission's map is acceptable because it provides two 60 percent Latino districts, in compliance with the Voting Right

Act. In addition, it keeps Marina, Seaside and Fort Ord whole; plus the north and south counties along with Carmel Valley are substantially in tact.

Fourth District Supervisor Sam Karas said, "I commend Dean Flippo, Bruce and Ernie for doing a yeoman's job in two and a half weeks. This is the worse mess that I've ever seen. I probably have more at stake at being taken out of my district than anyone, but we have to be fair to all minorities in Monterey County. We need to allow in the June election an opportunity for a Latino to be elected."

For that to happen, the commission recommended changing the district numbers. Karas, Strasser Kauffman, and 3rd District Supervisor Tom Perkins voted for the changes. Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck, representing District 2, abstained. First District Supervisor Judy Pennycook voted no.

Karas lives in Monterey, which would become part of District 5 if the commission's map is approved. Supervisor Judy Pennycook's District 1 is now District 2. She said that she would not move to seek election to the seat.

Also, Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck representing District 2, has announced her candidacy for Congress.

Seaside's Mayor Lance McClair said that he was not completely happy with the commission's map. "But this is not a perfect world."

Edith Johnsen, mayor of Marina, said that since 98 percent of what her city wanted was included in the commission's map, she would accept it.

Carmel Valley resident Dick Heuer is pleased with the board's decision because it keeps the valley whole. However, he said, "It will drastically change the peninsula's representation on the board of supervisors. We will have a Seaside and Marina district representative on the board which will affect the balance of power and negotiations on the future of Fort Ord."

Fran Farina, also a Carmel Valley resident, said, "I am pleased that we have prevailed in our effort to keep Carmel Valley in one supervisorial district. This is extremely important because it assures the integrity of the Carmel Valley Master Plan boundary."

She added, "Now, we have to get past the Department of Justice's scrutiny and, finally, Judge Ingram's approval."

If all goes well there will be a primary supervisorial election June 8 followed by a special election Aug. 3.

Hopefuls scamper for position

was reported that Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman would vie for Farr's assembly seat if the state rep runs for congress.

If either Shipnuck or Strasser Kauffman is displaced, the Seaside mayor is hopeful for an appointment to the board of supervisors. To McClair, the board of supervisors is a second-best to Congress. It is the governor who makes the appointment.

About all the scurrying for the higher rungs of office, McClair may have introduced the best ironic touch, saying, "Yes, that's right — everybody is running on a safe seat."

So there is more to gain than to lose for the whole lot.

About the prospect of so many contenders from his own party, he said, "I don't look at the issues as being partisan. I am going for the local issues that haven't been addressed by any party. I am taking about the issues of hard-working people, which have been caucused out of the partisan situation."

The lone Republican hopeful, McCampbell, said the issues haven't changed from when he was running against Panetta. He outlined them as unemployment and the difficulties of small business in the regional, the fate of Fort Ord and preserving the environment.

He said he and his Democratic opponents may see the issues as the same, "but the question is how you go about answering them that counts."

Asked whether he may be at a disadvantage running against the lineup of entrenched political figures, McCampbell responded, "Not at all. Just think of the 47,000 votes we got."

So, as Panetta quietly prepares for his ascent to the Executive Office of the President, the local group of politicians prepares for a noisy contest in upward mobility.

Environmental awareness at CHS

By SCOTT BREARTON

THEY DON'T fit the standard stereotype of "environmental activists." They aren't all clad in faded blue jeans and Birkenstocks, wearing crystals and patchouli oil.

They are a nearly even mix of ambitious young men and women, at different grade levels, some athletes, some honor students, all cooperating in a single cause at Carmel High School - to educate their fellow students about environmental issues.

Students Making a Right Tomorrow (SMART), an environmental action club at CHS, have made it their goal to instill in their peers a sense of personal responsibility: to be aware of the daily choices they make that affect the world around them.

Now in its fourth year, SMART is about 60 students strong, making it the largest club on campus, according to math teacher and advisor Vic Selby.

"CHS alumni Kate and Ali Daniels started SMART four years ago because they were concerned that not enough kids were conscious of the environment," Selby said.

The club raises money through fund raisers, such as car washes and the sale of reusable cloth lunch bags. The bags are assembled by members, using donated materials.

"Nobody's buying them because they're SMART CLUB members entered the 32nd annual Sand Castle Contest held at Carmel Beach last October, winning an award for outstanding design and construction. The theme for this year's effort was a trash monster engulfing the earth. ugly," observed one member at a recent club meeting.

Modification

The student acknowledged that the design might need modification to improve sales.

Money raised by SMART is used for a variety of worthy causes, including the "adoption" of two whales and land in a Brazilian rain forest through environmental organizations.

In addition to their fund-raising efforts, the club functions as a political action committee of sorts, lobbying the Associated Student Body for extra money when needed to complete projects.

Current SMART Club president Charlotte Henson, a sophomore, coordinates weekly meetings and assigns members to different committees and tasks. Members meet during their lunch break, brainstorming on new ways to raise environmental consciousness in their fellow students. The club plans next year to publish a newsletter that will focus on specific ways students can "make a right tomorrow."

SMART Club members do more than just talk about what needs to be done - they do it. Members coordinate Carmel High's campus recycling program, organize car pooling among students, and produce an annual "Earth Day" assembly. Many weekends are spent at local beaches, cleaning up trash wherever it lies.

Moss Landing

When a suggestion to clean up Moss Landing State Beach arose at a noon meeting, you could tell these kids were serious. They cited piles of discarded fishing line, plastic, and other debris as ample reason to shift their efforts where needed most.

And Selby provided the encouragement to move them to action.

"If you guys could get in there and get things going in the right direction, we could really turn things around."

Burgomelster and two new Councillors voted in. The five person Hamlet Council now included three members of the CDA (Carmel Dwellers Association).

After a brief period of jousting between the CDA and the GOGO's (Good Old Government Organization), the hamlet settled down to tranquility again. The Planning Commission, after two years of exhaustive study, overwhelmingly approved a revised commercial district zoning plan which intended to equalize opportunity for all.

Following this, hearings were conducted by the Hamlet Council this autumn and on Dec. 8, they voted 4-1 to approve the improved zoning revision. To the amazement of the hamlet's good burghers, even two of the Council's CDA members voted in favor of it, thus assuring its passage.

Meanwhile, in a neighboring hamlet of Carmelthal (translation Carmel Valley), a certain citizen woke up in the middle of the night and saw a vision which told him that he must lead a crusade in Carmel-by-the-Sea to save the good burghers from themselves and from the Hamlet Council.

Thereupon, acting on this midnight vision, Albert (The Iceman) Teppich-Sacker (translation — carpetbagger) moved into Carmel-by-the-Sea to lead a movement to sink the work of the Hamlet Council.

Although the zoning plan had been in the works for two years, Teppich-Sacker never appeared before the Planning Commission hearings to bespeak his point of view. Only when it came before the Hamlet Council, did Teppich-Sacker appear on the scene to lobby for his position.

Now, it has come to pass in this season of rejoicing, that Teppich-Sacker has installed himself from time to time at an entrance to Post Office 93921 to lead his visionary crusade to upset the good work of the Planning Commission and the Hamlet Council.

With verbal warnings of a T-shirt epidemic, Teppich-Sacker is attempting to gather names on a petition to force an election on the subject, at a cost of $12,000 to the good burghers of the hamlet, even at this time of serious budget problems.

Teppich-Sacker shows a sign and gives out flyers in the form of an editorial from The Herald. However, upon investigation, the message shown is only a news item from the Herald. The Herald does not endorse Teppich-Sacker's crusade.

When asked whom he represented, Teppich-Sacker answered that he represented the good burghers of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Upon further discussion, he confessed that he represented only some of the burghers of his newly adopted hamlet.

Teppich-Sacker stated that an election would result in a vote heavily favoring his midnight inspired vision. However, his confidence was seen to be rather thin when he turned down a $20 bet on the outcome.

Ah, the joys and miseries of this beautiful hamlet. As the Bard aptly put it, "Double, double, toil and trouble. Fire burn and cauldron bubble." But for the present, from another Englishman of note, "Merry Christmas to all and to all, a good night."

Major tragedy

Dear Editor:

Sometime during the night of Thursday, Dec. 10, some thugs broke into the Carmel Red Cross Chapter. After 76 years in existence, this is the first major tragedy!

How can children or people bite the hand that feeds them and helps them in their hour of need? If your children were not at home Thursday night, I hope you will ask them where they were. With all the problems in this crazy world, it's horrible to think that they now exist in your backyard. We've got a situation now that needs fixing. Let's all work together to get these bums off the streets, preferable doing homework or sleeping. I worked with the Boy's Club of New York City for three years. I know the problems. Help us address them.

Sincere thanks

Dear Editor:

The Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter of the American Red Cross extends its sincerest thanks to all those who helped make the 1992 Red Cross Disaster Relief Campaign such a huge success.

On a local level your compassion and generosity helped the Carmel chapter raise more than $36,000 for Disaster relief.

The 1992 National Red Cross Disaster Relief campaign raised more than $153.8 million as of Nov. 12, 1992. The money, nearly $95 million, provided desperately needed disaster relief to victims of Hurricane Andrew in Florida and Louisiana, Hurricane Iniki in Hawaii, and Typhoon Omar in Guam.

In these areas alone, more than 16,000 Red Cross disaster relief workers, five of them from the Carmel area, served more than six-and-a-half million meals, sheltered 167,000 people, and assisted more than 77,000 families. Workers also provided bulk distribution of relief supplies, mental health services, and individual help with applying for federal disaster recovery assistance.

On behalf of the board of directors, the volunteers, and the staff of the Carmel Chapter, may I say a big thank you to the community of neighbors helping neighbors.

Gift of an event

Dear Editor:

Festivities like the Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony on Ocean Avenue last Friday evening are what embodies the spirit of the season. It was an event that was pure celebration of the Christmas holiday, one that gives neighbors an opportunity to feel and be a part of the spirit of community, especially during this time of year when it is so easy to get lost in the frenzy. This "gift of an event" did not happen spontaneously. We owe a tremendous thank you for the long hours of hard work and dedication to community to Toni Jepson and Debbie Alexander at the CBA. It was another job well done!

Police Beat

Carmel Red Cross victim of burglary and vandalism

By PAUL WOLF

IT WAS a bit like stomping on sacred ground, or a particularly offensive form of foul play.

Vandalism and burglary at the Carmel chapter of the Red Cross. "It was quite a shock," said Lynette Balesteri, who is Red Cross manager at 8th Avenue and Dolores Street.

Well over $2,000 in electronic equipment was stolen late last week. To get to the loot, the culprits made forcible entry, causing at least $500 in damage to door jams, frames and filing cabinets.

A Red Cross building is not usually thought of as a warehouse for electronic goods. But the offenders here had little else to choose from, and they escaped with much plunder.

The items stolen included a 35mm camera, camcorder, a television with VCR, a portable radio and an audio tape recorder.

The camcorder was valued at $1500; the VCR and television about $600. All are engraved with serial numbers.

Said Balesteri: "We have no drugs. We have no money. Any checks are deposited each day. I don't know what their thinking was. I can't understand why anyone would think was anything interesting to take. There isn't."

The burglary occurred on either evening of Thursday, Dec. 10 or on Friday morning, Dec. 11, according to Carmel police.

"No strong leads"

"We have no strong leads so far," said Carmel Det. Sgt. Pete Poltras.

Nevertheless, Poltras said a nearby resident, after nightfall on Dec. 10, spotted a white male "standing in the doorway of the Red Cross."

The detective said the man was wearing blue zippered jacket. He added that the resident who made the report "thought he looked suspicious, but we didn't learn of her sighting until the next day. We don't know for sure that the person seen is related to the crime, although the actions taken appear to make that a possibility."

Poltras said the crime may be related to other burglaries in recent months within the city limits, but there is no proof. Also, within the Monterey County Sheriff's, there have been a number cash burglaries.

"They came through the exterior garage door," explained Balesteri, "then bashed in the door, which had a dead bolt. Actually, they kicked and kicked it repeatedly, and the door jam gave in. They broke the locks on the interior doors and the file cabinet."

The chapter manager said about $500 has been spent for cleaning up the vandalism. Locks have been changed; moldings and frames has been replaced.

"This is another business in town that didn't have an alarm system," noted Poltras.

Balesteri stressed the disenchantment such an event evoked. Said Balesteri: "It never occurred anybody would rob a Red Cross. It's like taking toys away from kids. It's something you just don't do."

City urges clearing away for the winter

AS WINTER approaches, we can soon expect our first good storm.

And with it, notes Jim Cullem, Carmel's director of public works, there will be piles of pine needles, leaves and twigs on private property and public spaces.

The City-of-Carmel urges residents to clean up their yards, clearing away debris and placing it in lawn bags.

Do your own tree inspections

WITH THE stormy season upon us, City Forester Gary Kelly recommends private citizens conduct their own tree-safety inspections.

During a storm is a good time to check your trees. An alarm bell should go off in your mind, according to Kelly, if:

- There is "a separation between the soil and the trunk," which is an indication that the roots of the tree are moving.

- You notice on the windward side of the tree that the roots are actually moving up and down.

Once again, this may be time for an inspection.

- There is, after a storm, a "large mound" developing on the windward side. Again, time for a professional evaluation, either private or from the city.

They keep the bags and leave them for the next scheduled pick up by the John Roscelli Corp. toward the end of December.

City officials are urging residents not to sweep pine needles, leaves and twigs into the street, since the street sweeper is unable to handle the task of picking up such items; branches jam the vacuum tubes.

Also, debris that is swept into the street can clog the storm drain culverts at intersections, causing serious flooding problems.

Carmel Valley Outlook

Rancho San Carlos

Agencies must wait for info

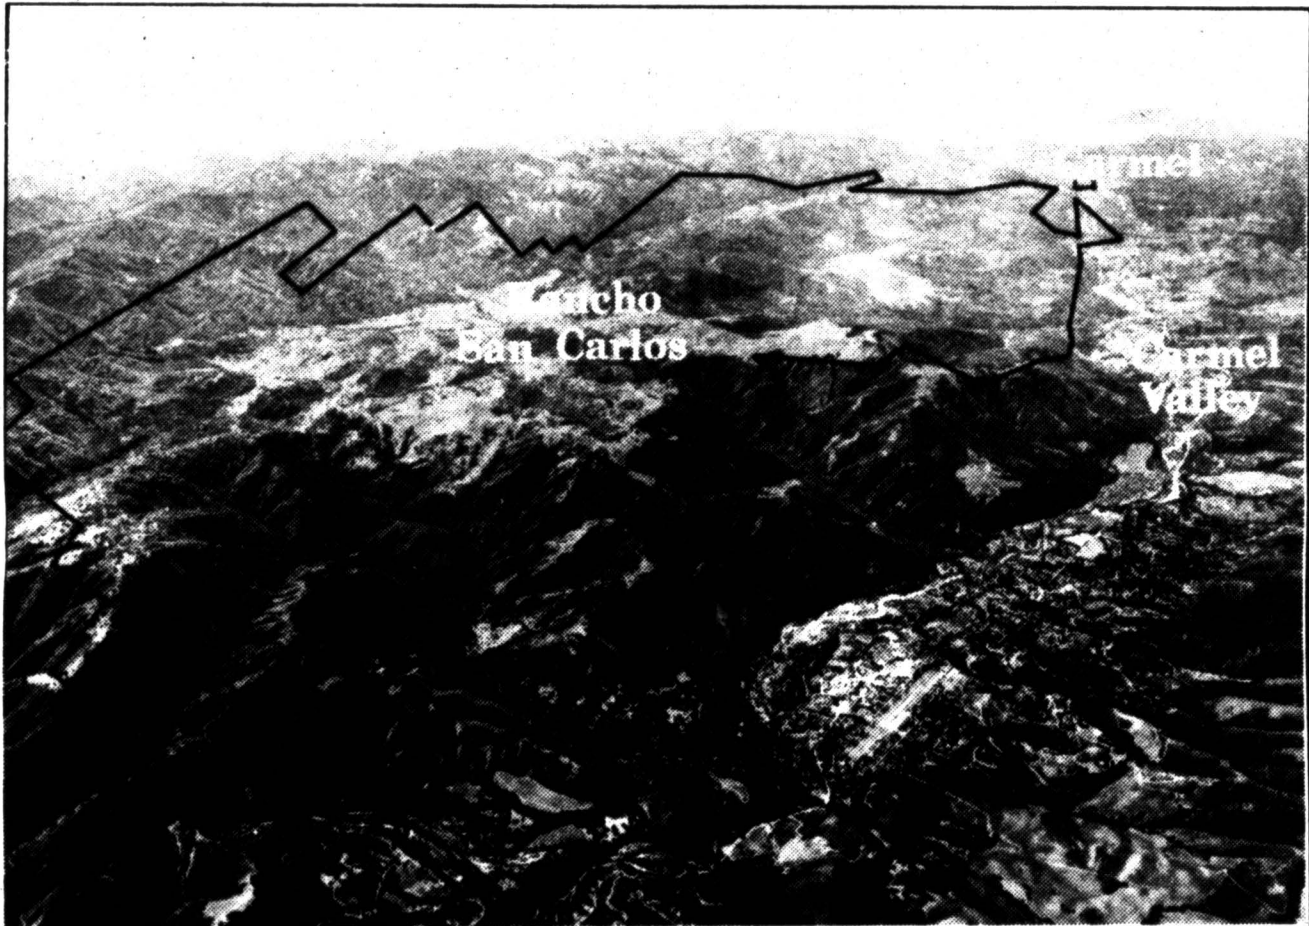

By SUSAN BECK

THE QUESTIONS most often asked concerning Rancho San Carlos are about water.

Where? How much? And when?

Thomas Gray, managing partner of the ranch, said, "We will not be providing any further information to any agencies until we file an application for our project."

But, an application cannot be filed until the county adopts a special supplemental Environmental Impact Report (EIR) to the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan, which is specific to Rancho San Carlos.

RANCHO SAN Carlos is about two-thirds the size of the area within the Carmel Valley Master Plan and larger than Del Monte Forest.

Gray said that extensive studies have been going on for the last 18 months at the ranch. Despite the fact that Rancho San Carlos is not within the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, he said that "We know the importance of the relation between our water resource at the ranch and Carmel Valley's. Our water consultant has been meeting with the district staff as an accommodation to make sure they understood the work we are doing."

He added that the team of hydrologists is "getting ready" simultaneously with the county's efforts to approve the environmental report.

The EIR was mandated in 1987 after three years of litigation set in motion by the former owners of Rancho San Carlos, the Oppenheimer family.

The Oppenheims had proposed to build a 3,800-unit residential village, complete with golf course and hotel. The plans included its own water supply and sewage treatment facility.

The family's vision also included providing their own police and fire protection. Sixteen-thousand acres were designated as permanent open space.

In addition, the package set aside 1,350 acres to the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District for expansion of Garland Park in Carmel Valley.

It was pointed out at the time by the Oppenheims' attorney, Brian Finegan, that Rancho San Carlos is larger than Del Monte Forest and two-thirds the size of the entire Carmel Valley Master Plan area.

County planning recommended zoning up to 2,000 homes and a hotel on 2,500 acres with the stipulation the remaining property be undeveloped.

But the county board, as part of its peninsula area plan, allowed for a density of one unit per 160 acres, which would accommodate 125 homes to be developed on the entire 20,000 acres of Rancho San Carlos.

The Oppenheims sued the county. The court ruled that the board had made changes in the density too extreme for what the planning commission had recommended. The court held that the board should have adopted a subsequent EIR rather than an EIR addendum.

When that is finally completed and adopted by the county board, an application for the present proposed project at Rancho San Carlos may be filed.

It was due to be completed in August of 1991.

"The county is a year behind schedule," said Gray. "It's the county's obligation to get a land-use designation finalized. If I had my way, it would be completed."

Filing will probably take place about three to six months after the EIR is adopted, he said. "I believe it will be toward the end of 1993."

RSC Water update

Goal is to build redundancy into water system

TO DATE the owners of Rancho San Carlos have tested 35 well sites in an attempt to find water deposits in the deep bedrock of the 20,000-acre property.

Joe Oliver, the hydrogeologist for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, said that it is not unusual to drill several wells when the water is in dispersed bedrock groundwater systems.

"Looking for water in bedrock is different than having an aquifer that is primarily sand and gravel," said Oliver. "You have to adopt different methods."

He said that so far 88 percent of wells that have been drilled at Rancho San Carlos have produced about one gallon per minute.

Bob Greenwood

Geologist speaks his mind

By SUSAN BECK

ROBERT GREENWOOD is concerned about Rancho San Carlos and a few other things.

At a recent Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (CVPOA) meeting Greenwood, a geologist, expressed his strong recommendation that the organization endorse a resource conservation 160-acre per unit land-use designation for most of Rancho San Carlos with perhaps with some 40-acre parcels.

The managers of Rancho San Carlos are requesting 160-acre and 40-acre parcel land-use designations for the 20,000-acre ranch property as part of an amendment to the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan.

In a letter to the Monterey Planning Commissioners Greenwood wrote, "most of it (the ranch) is steep and rugged country. Division of such terrain into 40-acre parcels, with their attendant access roads, would inevitably be disruptive to wildlife. We should not be lulled by statements of developers' intent to place rigid ecological restrictions on future owners of properties."

His letter also addressed the question of water.

"The geology of Rancho San Carlos makes it almost impossible to quantify the long-term safe yield of sub-surface water," wrote Greenwood. "There is no through-going aquifer under the ranch, in the generally-accepted sense of a rock formation with predictable storage and transmission characteristics."

He added, "Instead, deep wells will penetrate fractured granite, which is a hit-and-miss proposition. I do believe that the county, in making zoning decisions, should be aware of the lack of predictability for water supply."

Greenwood told the CVPOA board, "The issue is not the details of the Rancho San Carlos plan, but the land-use designation based independently of any proposed development."

His request was not acted upon by the property owner's board, which has him deeply concerned.

"In the '70s we had more people involved with CVPOA who were environmentally committed than has been the case in the last few years," said Greenwood.

It was in the 1970s that he and his wife, Helena, moved to Carmel Valley.

He got involved right away with protecting the future of Carmel Valley by joining CVPOA. He was also on the committee that created the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

"We went as far as we could go with the master plan," said Greenwood. "It was very daring to make any limitations at all. It was a totally new idea to the area."

But, those limitations may not be enough today, he added. With an avid love for the great outdoors, the encroaching numbers of people who want to live here concerns him.

"The real conflict is between keeping the valley semi-rural, at the same time having affordable homes for people to live," said Greenwood.

TOM GRAY

"Each individual well is not a large producer," said Oliver. "They need to build redundancy into their system so that if one well shuts down, they can go to another well for water."

He said that the wells at the ranch have been tested from four to seven hours. But, it would definitely be preferable to test them for anywhere between two weeks to a month.

Overall, Oliver said, "They are approaching the situation in the right manner to make sure the water comes only from the ranch."

Understanding Golf

By JANET COLES

SIDE HILL LIES: Always remember to handle slight side hill lies through set-up adjustments only. To keep things simple and consistent, minimize departures from your basic swing techniques.

I suggest swing changes only when side hill lies are severe.

There are four parts to this approach.

Part 2 — BALL BELOW FEET

1. Grip club as close to end as possible.
2. Setup with appropriate knee bend to get fully down to the ball.
3. Stand slightly closer to the ball.
4. Aim slightly left: Ball will have tendency to curve right.
5. Promote balance by keeping weight further back on heels of feet.
6. Make a practice swing and take a divot to determine where you should position the ball relative to your feet.

(Editor's note: Janet Coles is a member of the Ladies Professional Golf Association and toured 14 seasons, winning four tour events. She retired as a top 30 all-time leading money winner. Coles teaches golf at Rancho Canada Golf Club in Carmel Valley and can be reached at 624-0111.)

Local horse owner wins grand national

JULIE FOSTER of Carmel received the Amateur Owner Jumpers award and the Amateur Owner Jumper Sweepstakes award at the 48th Grand National Rodeo, Horse and Stock Show.

The show was part of the annual Horse Show held recently at the Cow Palace in San Francisco.

Quarter horses, Arabians, cow horses, cutting horses, western saddlebred, Appaloosas, and hunter/jumpers participated in the 12-day event.

The 48th Grand National Rodeo is the largest combined show of its kind in the United States.

Rancho San Carlos concerns local environmentalist

His interest in the environmental concerns started early on.

He was born in England, moving to the United States with his parents before World War II. He had a general interest in science, but because he loved being outdoors he decided to focus on geology at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

His first real geologist position was in Nigeria. He had returned to England during the war to join the Colonial Service and was sent to Nigeria to look for tin, which was very important at the time.

He came back from the war unscathed and grateful for not having to go to the front lines, deciding then to go back to the states for graduate work at Harvard.

After Harvard, there was a three-year stint in northern Brazil and a teaching position in Michigan. Being a professor hadn't been on his mind at all, but he ended up spending the next 17 years in teaching and research at the University of Huston, Texas, and Rutgers in New Jersey.

When he decided on an early retirement, he moved to Carmel Valley.

During those first years, part of his work on the Carmel Valley Master Plan incorporated his skills as a geologist. He put together the first detailed estimate of groundwater resources for the Carmel Valley aquifer for the plan. Today, he is the chairman of the Water Management Committee for CVPOA.

One of the limitations in the master plan that may not suffice in the valley today, said Greenwood, is the plan's allowance for 37 new subdivision units per year. The drought in recent years has placed a moratorium on building subdivisions, he added. "However, desalination or a new Los Padres Dam, would remove this constraint."

He favors a dam over desalination, but either solution creates a dilemma: more water means a healthier Carmel River, but it also opens the door for more buildout in the area.

"I understand that people want to make money," said Greenwood. "Even though the master plan allows for new subdivisions, and despite the fact that I was a founder of that plan, I see now that the traffic increase is amazing even with minimal buildout. More subdivisions will change the whole character of the valley."

Then again, he pointed out, "We say piously in the master plan that there should be a socio-economic mix, but it doesn't work out that way. The houses get more and more expensive."

It's a back and forth scenario, said Greenwood. "I don't have the answer, I wish I did."

Doris Day's Best Friends

Happy holidays for your pets

THE HOLIDAYS are a time for family and friends and with all the hustle and bustle, family pets are sometimes overlooked. It's important to keep your pets out of danger and in on all the festivities, so keep these tips in mind:

•When you are wrapping gifts, be sure your pets don't run off with the yarn or ribbon. They can cause serious intestinal damage if swallowed. The same goes for shiny tinsel.

•Sharp pine needles are not only toxic, but have been known to cause internal damage as well.

•Curious puppies and kittens will be attracted to all the strings and wires lying around and those can be fatal chew toys. Keep them out of your pet's reach.

•Prevent your pet from drinking harmful Christmas tree water by covering the stand, and be sure to secure the tree properly so it can't be knocked over.

•When you're baking holiday goodies, don't enlist your four-legged as a taste tester. He doesn't need the extra calories. The weight difference between you and your pet turns a scant 200 calories for you into a major meal for your small dog or cat.

•Be firm when friends want to give pets a bite of pumpkin pie or a spoonful of gravy. Rich foods can cause severe intestinal problems.

•Chocolate contains theobromine, a powerful stimulant that is toxic to pets. Believe it or not, as little as two ounces of dark chocolate can kill a 10-pound dog! Alcohol does not agree with pets either and even a small amount can cause serious illness, so be very careful to keep these harmful substances away from your pet.

•The beautiful plants and flowers that make this time of year so special can injure your pet. Poinsettia leaves, holly berries and mistletoe should be kept away from your dog or cat.

Everyone loves presents and pets are no exception. A new chew toy or a box of tasty biscuits will please Fido, and your kitty-cat will surely love a carpeted perch or squeaky mouse.

Have a wonderful holiday and take especially good care of your Best Friend. He deserves it!

See you next week!

Open hearts, free spirits

SOME YOUNG people today call Christmas a sham. They reason that winter solstice, when the sun reaches its southernmost point on the celestial sphere, is the only actual winter happening that should be observed. They shave their heads, build bonfires, dance and howl at the moon, in testament to ancient ritual.

These same young people denounce the establishment that temporarily puts aside the cares and concerns of everyday life to observe the Christmas holiday. They cite the commercialism of Christmas, what they see as the hypocritical phoniness of their parents, in making an effort to spread good cheer for one week out of the year, as meaningless.

Young people will always bridle at their elders, that's the way of this world. But to those who no longer see the importance of a Christmas tree or want to believe in the Christmas spirit, I invite them to Christmas in the country.

Wait for a moonless night, then drive out Carmel Valley Road, way past the Village, to where it's so dark you can easily trace the stars shining crisply overhead. Your headlights may catch the dark shapes and glistening eyes of the mother cows and their fall calves in the fields along the road. After down shifting to crest a frosty hill, your eyes, now anxiously accustomed to the wall of dark, will instinctively blink in reaction to the sight of a wonderful rectangular arch of blue Christmas lights strung over the entrance to what locals know as the old Bloomquist Sisters rancho. Blue lights, appearing out of nowhere, miles from the main house, a welcome home for any wandering cowboy.

Turn right on Tassajarra Road and then right again on Cachagua Road. Drive slowly as you wind down the narrow valley and you'll be able to look into the windows of ranch houses and cabins. Few country people can afford an outdoor display with Santa and reindeer on the roof, but inside candles are glowing, Christmas trees twinkling, fires blazing.

When you get to Ringer's General Store, stop and go in. As you open the door a "Frosty the Snowman" gadget laughs, "Ho, ho, ho," in a deep Santa Claus voice.

Marilyn, the storekeeper, is wearing a red sweatshirt with reindeer on it. "Hi! Merry Christmas! Haven't seen you in a while! Where've you been?" The greeting is as warm as the coals glowing in the little wood stove. Christmas music is playing. White lights are flashing on and off on the tree. A lone poinsettia, a package of cranberries and nuts for cracking, signs of the holiday, are prominently displayed. Two cowboys come in and buy a pound of bacon and a 12-pack of beer.

"Merry Christmas!"

Things you might not see, but should know about Christmas in the country, are the 13-year-old girl who delivers Christmas cards to her friends and neighbors on horseback, the people who planted a stand of pine trees a long time ago and now every year, offer a few to close friends at Christmas time, the family struggling to make ends meet but who always has room at their Christmas table for two or three more, the native Americans up on the ridge, matter-of-factly joking about frozen mud and a broke-down generator, as they prepare in their own way for the holiday. Christmas in the country has a special meaning of neighborliness and caring. Many country people don't have the money to indulge in the commercialism you denounce, but they do have the Christmas spirit. No matter how you choose to observe this time of year, either in the city or the country, don't let your heart cool to the meaning of Christmas.

The spirit is there, you just have to look for it.

STOCKING STUFFERS

Mark Stromberg, resident manager of Hasting Natural History Reservation in upper Carmel Valley writes in the November newsletter:

"Varied thrushes, a bird abundant here during some winters, are once again widespread. Over 500 Band-tailed pigeons were wheeling over Poison Oak hill at mid-month. By the end of the month, most of the abundant acorns of this fall were gone."

He continues to describe studies in progress at the Reservation.

"As our faithful readers know, we have been trying to find a way to recognize individual California Tiger Salamanders. Walt Koenig had been photocopying their bellies, but found them hard to control on glass.

Then we found two major technological advances. First, the 'mander masher.' This is a hinged plexiglass affair with a foam insert which allows us to hold the salamander between a clear plate and foam pad for clearer photocopies. Brad found out about a system of tiny glass-covered radio emitters which can be surgically implanted in animals and read by a portable scanner."

Another new entry is soon-to-be-ex Vice President Dan Quayle. The press has been asked to be kind to him. Now, if Dan will just do his part...

Pacific Lines

By Scott Brearton

FORREST MILLINGTON of Pacific Grove shows off a 21-pound ling cod caught in mid-November near Point Sur - a new personal record.

An ancient remedy for a toothache was to eat a mouse.

'Fish enhancement' project shows promise

AN AMBITIOUS "fish enhancement" project is underway in Moss Landing, in an attempt to breathe new life into Monterey Bay's frail salmon fishing industry.

The project involves bringing Chinook or King salmon from Northern California and releasing them at Moss Landing. According to project coordinator Tom Villa, Moss Landing Harbor Master, over one million fish have been released into Monterey Bay so far.

When the fish mature in three years, organizers hope they will return in enough numbers to revitalize salmon runs and the commercial fishing industry.

A commissioner with the Moss Landing Harbor District, Villa has been instrumental in lobbying government agencies to support the endeavor.

Villa said he expects the fish enhancement project to provide a four-million dollar boost to the Monterey Bay fishing industry at a time when it's needed most. This figure is encouraging, considering the project's initial investment was only $30,000.

Villa is currently working on approval for a fish hatchery near Moss Landing, which would eliminate having to import young salmon from Big Creek, where they are currently reared.

The decrease in salmon stocks over the past several years can be illustrated in the decline of the state salmon-fishing fleet - from 3,200 licensed vessels in 1983 to only 1,200 this year.

Drought to blame?

Officials attribute much of the problem to the drought, now in its sixth year. The theory is that when water levels decrease, the water temperature increases. Salmon prefer colder temperatures and have a difficult time adjusting to the warmer water. Lower water levels in key spawning areas are also hurting King salmon runs.

Commercial fishermen in Monterey Bay are pinning their hopes of restoring King salmon runs to previous levels on the success of fish enhancement projects like this one.

Golf & Travel

By Ray A. March

Season's end is only the beginning

FOR SOME, golf knows no boundaries. It proceeds through our lives oblivious to headlines and events, and it's only our own sense of appropriateness that dictates our control over the game.

Existential as that may seem, you're either playing golf tomorrow, or you're not. Merry Christmas.

A review

During the last calendar year we've had the opportunity to see and play a variety of golf courses and to meet a lot of nice people. We'd like to share some of those experiences with you:

Janet Coles at Rancho Canada is wonderful, and we want everyone to know that. She gives a helluva lesson - even in near freezing weather - and her sense of humor keeps this crazy game in perspective.

RJ Harper at Pebble Beach makes it all look easy. He survived the U.S. Open and didn't even appear to age in the process. A true gentleman.

Robert Trent Jones Jr. continued his campaign to have golf courses recognized for their environmental contributions, and we hope he keeps up the fight. Certainly his Links at Spanish Bay, with Tom Watson and Sandy Tatum, and Tahoe's Resort at Squaw Creek Course are marvelous examples.

Karen Hunter went through 1992 underrated, we feel. She put together the behind-the-scenes staff that staged the '92 Open and if the guys at the USGA aren't looking at her for a top national assignment, they're blind. Our advice to the Pebble Beach Company: do something before she's on to other, and bigger, things in golf.

As for the PBC. Too bad it didn't make any money off the U.S. Open, but if it's any consolation there are plenty of merchants in Carmel who know how that feels. Next time, bring it back and get the community directly involved.

Ken White, mayor of Carmel, sold a great 'ol canvas golf bag with real leather trim (he noted) for $5 at a summer garage sale. That kind of deal can not go unnoticed, nor unappreciated. Thanks, Ken.

Michelle Corbin at American-Hawaii Cruises in San Francisco has to be recognized for inaugurating a super golfing concept, and that was the four-island golf cruise she hosted last April. She's promised to do it again, so check it out in this column when there's more information.

Our appreciation to Harold Firstman for his dogged persistence in keeping the now-titled Pebble Beach Invitational Pro-Am alive. Previously known as the Spaulding, this event - and Firstman - are fighting the odds with a calendar date of Dec. 31 - Jan. 3. Some day the tournament may find its place in the sun - and not Phoenix, again, we hope.

Advice to Dan Quail. If your people finally get the message to the AT&T people that you have accepted their invitation to play in the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am in February, please have the CIA and the FBI brief you on the pitfalls of playing golf on the Monterey Peninsula.

Speaking of the AT&T Pro-Am. Has anyone asked the folks at Robert Louis Stevenson School what their secret is in attracting top names to their annual TAG weekend? The next fund-raiser is March 27, and our hunch is there is a prayer of thanks that it doesn't go head to head with the AT&T.

As for golf courses played in 1992: first on the list of life-threatening experiences was the round at Pebble Beach Golf Links 30 days before the U.S. Open.

On the more sane side of the game, the Resort at Squaw Creek, Ojai Valley, Corral de Tierra, Quail and the Village Course at Kapaula are among the best.

On the insane side are the Plantation Course at Kapaula, the municipal driving range off Waikiki and Princeville on Kauai.

On the slightly insane side is Bob-Bob Spiwak's private nine-hole pitch and putt in Mazama, Washington, but then the insanity may be more the man than the course.

Merry Christmas, too, to my magazine editors: George Fuller at Western Links, Bob Feeman at Robb Report and Doug Hardy and Jack McDermott at Golf Digest. I know they would not want to be left off any list of golf crazies.

And Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to you, too.

Ingale Bamford School in New York City, will describe the work of the Women's Commission for Refugee Women and Children. Organized in 1989, the commission focuses attention on the women and children who make up most of the world's 39.7 million refugees and internally displaced peoples. It was founded under the auspices of the International Rescue Committee, the largest nonsectarian voluntary refugee organization in the United States.

Commission members have visited refugee women and children in Southeast Asia, Africa, and Central America. Their reports are widely distributed to international organizations, governments, foundations, and voluntary agencies, and their testimony before Congressional committees has led to the passage of bills that more effectively address the needs of refugee women and children. This lecture is a program in The Edwin L. Wiegand Dialogues in the Arts and Sciences at Santa Catalina School.

TOUR DE TORO BIKE RUN SET

Monterey Mountain Bike Association presents the second annual "Tour de Toro," a poker run and mountain bike fun ride at Toro Park to support MoMBAs activities and Boy Scout Troop 93.

Prize support has been provided by Aquarian Bicycles, Answer Products and Vel-Tec Boyer. Between 9:30 a.m. and noon on Jan. 30, 1993, the event will cover numerous trails with courses designed to enable all skill levels from beginner to advanced to ride the park in a non-competitive manner and win prizes including the grand prize of a specialized suspension mountain bike.

Cost of the event is $20 per entrant to Jan. 15, 1993, $25 thereafter. Entrance fee includes the fee for the poker ride, other skill contests, T-shirt and chicken barbecue. There is an additional daily automobile use fee of $4 to enter the park which entrants are encouraged to pay in order to further assist Toro Park.

Entry forms can be obtained through most local bike shops, by calling 372-2134 or at the park on the day of the event. All those interested are invited to participate in the festivities at Toro Park and enjoy the recreational activity of mountain bicycling.

The Walker House, designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, will be visited Jan. 16.

On Jan. 23, the tour will stop at the Green Studio as well as other important buildings in Carmel.

In addition to class registration fees, both of these half-unit courses have a supplemental fee of $25 to cover the cost of bus transportation and a picnic lunch provided by Mediterranean Market.

BRIDGE CLUB CONDUCTS SILVER POINT TOURNAMENT

A one-day Silver Point Tournament was held by Carmel Community Bridge Club on Wednesday, Dec. 16.

The competition was strong, including a number of Life-Masters. But Dorothy Thomas and Rick Kernoll, who together have about 50 master points, stole the show by scoring a 68 percent game. This will give them a good chance of being listed as an overall winner in the district. Ted Holt and Betty Jackson also have this opportunity with their 65 percent game.

Under the two top scorers in third place East-West were Vera Polland and Clara Pyle; in fourth place Lois Ebert and Bob Hansen; fifth place Doris Heil and Dor-

Padre Sports Review

By James Genone

No hope for opponents at Carmel basketball tournament

UNSTOPPABLE. This is the only word that can accurately describe the Padres as they battled their way to the championship at the 46th annual Carmel basketball tournament last weekend. Never in serious trouble with any opponent, the closest the Padres came to losing all weekend was a one-point deficit to Seaside, which quickly turned into a eight point win. The Padres were solid on both offense and defense, and the three tournament wins came by an average of 19 points.

"We showed real good balance on both ends of the floor," said Padre head coach Rich Frank.

On the way to improving their record to 8-1, the Padres scored victories over Terra Nova, Seaside, and defending state champion, Palma. R.J. Powell was named tournament MVP, and made the all-tournament team, along with teammate Ryan Edwards.

A monstrous dunk

On Friday, the Padres played Terra Nova, probably the least talented of the teams they had to face. Carmel won the game by a margin of 28 points, 73-44. R.J. Powell had his best game so far this season, scoring 25 points, grabbing four rebounds, dishing out three assists, and snagging four steals. One of those steals resulted in a monstrous dunk that brought the crowd to its feet and kept them cheering long enough to see Powell make a great defensive play on the other end. The dunk was an exclamation point to a game that was decided before the first quarter had ended. Ben Fahrner had 10 points, and Jason Edwards contributed nine points, six rebounds, and four assists off the bench.

The following night Carmel faced the Spartans of Seaside in what turned out to be their toughest game of the tournament. The Padres jumped out to an early lead, but Seaside crept back, and even took a one point lead in the third quarter. Unfortunately for Seaside, the Padres immediately regained the lead and took over the game, eventually winning by the score of 51-43.

"I think we showed a lot of character when we took the game over after letting Seaside get back into it," said Frank.

Powell led the team once again with 17 points, and Nate Stiles had a big night with 13 points, five rebounds, and five assists. Stiles also exhibited an uncanny ability to block opponents' shots frequently, and with authority. His Shaquille O'Neal-like swats often came at critical game points, and get the crowd involved in the action. Ben Fahrner also poured in 11 points to go along with his four boards and four assists.

The win over the Spartans put the Padres in the final, and they were excited to play defending state champion and league rival Palma.

"We were very confident playing Palma," said R.J. Powell. "We were playing well, and they lost a lot of people from last year."

Never looked back

Carmel jumped out to an early 12-2 lead, and never looked back, as they went on to win 64-41. Powell paced the team with 20 points, just under his tournament average of 21. He also contributed six steals, five assists, and four rebounds. Senior Ryan Edwards enjoyed a fine game, scoring 13 points, dishing out five assists, and pulling down five boards. Most of his baskets came at critical points in the game and kept momentum on the side of the Padres.

The play of the Padres so far has sent a real statement to future opponents: Carmel is for real. Some may have criticized Carmel as a one-man team, but the Padres have clearly proven otherwise. The entire starting team puts up all-league numbers, and Dean Wilson and Jason Edwards, who come off the bench at Carmel, would start on most teams in the area. Behind them, Dylan Coleman, Joey Bernhard, and Ranon Masliyah are all solid players that can turn in a good performance at any time. Carmel has a lot of games to play, but they shouldn't lose too many.

"If we continue to execute the way we are now, it's going to take a lot to beat us," said assistant coach Ron Powell.

Soccer

The Padres Soccer team improving, and they showed it last week with games against Alisal, RLS, and PG. Carmel started out the week with a tough loss to Alisal, one of the best teams in Monterey County, 8-0, but managed a 2-2 tie versus RLS. Carlos Gallo, the Padres leading scorer, had both Padres goals, and contributed two more on the way to a 5-4 win over PG to end the week. Andri Suwono, Ben Thompson, and Santiago Lozano also scored for the Padres. Lozano, who is back from an injury, should give Carmel a boost going into the rest of their schedule.

Girls Basketball

The lady Padres suffered only their second loss against eight wins last week after non-league competition against Watsonville and Monterey. The girls beat Watsonville 39-29 last Monday to move their record to 8-1. Doreen Evans had 19 points, and Erin Kraft contributed 12. In the second game of the week, Kraft score 14, but the Padres went on to lose by four, 37-33. The Padres resume play Jan. 3 versus King City.

Fees are based on a sliding scale. For more information call 394-4622.

The exotic tamarillo

WHAT IS the Tamarillo (Cyphomandra betacea), Jambolan, Java Plum or Tomato de Arbol, or Tree Tomato as the English called it? This glossy scarlet or golden yellow, satin-skinned, egg-shaped produce is a fruit, actually in the same family as the eggplant. It has a rich apricot-colored flesh with an interesting circular pattern of purple-black seeds and an unusual slightly sweet-scented aroma that I can't say is exactly like this fruit or that fragrance.

As I mentioned, I discovered this exotic fruit at the Maori Hangi (feast) in New Zealand. I was fascinated with it and what could be done with it. I thought it came from New Zealand. However, in researching this I found that it is native to the Peruvian Andes, Chile, Ecuador and Bolivia. It grows on a small fast-growing evergreen and is now cultivated all over South and Central America, Jamaica, Puerto Rico, Haiti, southern Asia, the East Indies, New Guinea, Australia and thank goodness New Zealand (for a brief moment I thought it might have been imported).

Indelible purple stain

New Zealand has been instrumental since 1967 in promoting this fruit as a tamarillo and not as the English name tree tomato. Their posters are displayed at supermarkets and green grocers (as they are called) and show the fruit on top of tarts and ice-cream sundaes. One would think fruit is sweet, but this one is not and it is eaten without the skin, which can be peeled with a vegetable peeler or dipped in boiling water for a minute with the ends scored with a knife, or like peppers put over a flame until the skins split. One should not cut the fruit on a counter that stains, for it leaves an indelible purple stain.

The United States does grow this fruit, but it is not well known. Its season is from May to October, and they are a good source for vitamins A and C. One-half cup contains about 50 calories. Look for firm, heavy fruits and let them ripen at room temperature until they give slightly (like an avocado) and have a fragrance. Then they can be refrigerated for up to 7 to 10 days. The yellow tamarillos are milder and sweeter than the red.

Unusual tasty concoctions

Most people agree that cooked tamarillos are better than those in the raw state, and in any case sugar (honey) and acid (like lemon juice) need to be added to bring out the unique flavor, which is said to be a cross between tomatoes, plums, bananas and apples. Tamarillos are good baked, or made into chutneys and relishes, purees, sherbets and sauces. You might come up with your own unusual tasty concoctions. The more of us that ask our grocers to get this fruit, the more popularized and readily available it will become in the United States.

Annabel Langein, a New Zealand food authority, uses the tamarillo in a "South Seas Hollandaise Sauce" — Combine 3 egg yolks, 1 tsp. lemon juice and 1/2 tsp. salt in a food processor. Heat five ounces of unsalted butter on low until bubbling, but do not brown. Turn the processor on and slowly add the hot butter. Once incorporated and thick, scrape down sides and add one medium red tamarillo, peeled and roughly chopped and process until smooth and pink. Makes about 1-1/2 cups. Langein serves this on fish, potatoes and other plain vegetables. To add my touch, I would add a garnish of diced or minced tamarillo that has been poached in a light, simple syrup flavored with a little lemon or lime juice.

Another New Zealand food consultant and writer Grace Kirschenbaum prepares a Tamarillo-Banana Puree (Used in a variety of ways, such as spooned over fresh or cooked fruit, puddings, spread in jelly rolls, between cake layers and parfaits made with creme fraiche, or blended with cream cheese as a spread). For 2 cups: Slice two large red peeled tamarillos, combine in a bowl with 1/3 cup lemon juice, two medium bananas (peeled and sliced) and 1/3 cup sugar; toss, and let stand for about 1/2 hour. Then puree fruit in a processor or blender until smooth. Scrape into a small pot. Bring to a boil, stirring regularly. Cool, then cover and refrigerate.

Elizabeth Schneider, a well known food writer, has another couple of preparations: Golden Tamarillo

Salad/Relish — Slice cross-wise as many peeled tamarillos as you want, figuring one to 1-1/2 per person. Season heavily with sugar and salt, then drench with lime juice. Strew with finely snipped mint and serve.

Schneider also makes a Tamarillo, Banana Orange Sherbet which she serves with Middle Eastern and Oriental meals. Ingredients: one large navel orange, 1/2 small cinnamon stick (broken up), 1/4 tsp. allspice berries, 3/4 cup sugar, pinch of salt, 1-1/2 cups water, two good-sized tamarillos (peeled), one large banana (chopped), lemon juice to taste, (optional: Kirsch or other eau-de-vie). Method: Combine rind of 1/2 orange with cinnamon, allspice, sugar, salt and water; bring to a boil. Simmer, covered 10 minutes. Cool, strain and chill. Cut tamarillo into chunks; press through medium disk of food mill. Peel and chunk orange (both halves); combine in processor with banana; whirl to a fine puree. Sieve. Then stir puree into tamarillo; add chilled syrup. Add lemon juice (and eau-de-vie) to taste. Pour into the can of an ice cream-machine. Chill thoroughly. Freeze according to manufacturer's directions. Scoop into a container and leave in freezer for half a day or longer. Soften slightly in refrigerator to serve.

These next two recipes are very easy for baked fruit to be used with meats or as a dessert. Baked Tamarillos in Syrup — For each person, peel one tamarillo and cut fruit across into 1/4-inch rounds. Arrange in a baking dish and sprinkle one tsp. sugar, a pinch of salt, a pinch of pepper and 1/2 tsp. lemon juice over each tamarillo. Bake in preheated 375-degree oven about 20 minutes or until tender, basting once with the syrup.

Honey-Baked Tamarillos — Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Peel six tamarillos and slice into 1/4 inch disks. Arrange in a baking dish and drizzle with honey and lime juice. Bake 20 minutes or until tender. Serve garnished with yogurt and mint leaves; serve alone as an accompaniment to lamb or with cake, ice cream or other desserts. (Makes four servings)

If this new food has sparked your curiosity, you can ask your grocer to help you find the tam-uh-rihl-oh.

Sheriff's Department suggests safer toys for young children this Christmas season

CHANCES ARE this holiday season you will be giving at least one present to a very special child. The Monterey County SAFE KIDS Coalition and the Crime Prevention Unit of the Monterey County Sheriff's Department suggest that when you make your list, be sure to check it twice to assure that safety has been considered.

Here are important points to consider when deciding which toys are right for your child:

First, make sure that the toy you purchase is appropriate for the age and development of the child.

Second, beware of the following:

- Toys with small, removable parts are hazardous, particularly to children under age 3;
- Toys with sharp points or edges may enable a child to unintentionally cut or stab himself or another person.
- Toys that produce loud noises may permanently harm a child's hearing.
- Propelled toys should have soft, non-removable ends to prevent eye injury; and
- Electronic toys should be saved for a child who is at least 8 years old.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Merry Christmas

YEARS AGO, I had a French professor, M. L'Abbe Jean Jacques Pelltier, who would have made an ideal dinner companion for the character in Charles Dickens' Tale of Two Cities, Madame La Farge. She knitted vigorously and joyfully as the heads of French nobles were chopped off by the efficient invention of Dr. Josef lynoce Guillotine.

M. L'Abbe Pelltier would say, with genuine venom and obvious delight, "I forgive, but I never forget." Of course, this meant that he cherished all injuries real and imaginary. He encased them carefully in a strong box from which he brought his gems of hatred to embarrass, shame and perplex his friends and foes.

We wonder how many marriages, family relations and friendships have been wrecked on the rocks of a long and mean memory. As we prepare for Christmas, we should begin by digging a grave six-feet deep and bury the box of injuries without a headstone. This is the ideal time to put into practice our blessed Lord's advice to forgive not seven times, but seventy times seven.

The Rev. Peter Marshall, the beloved Presbyterian minister and chaplain to the United States Senate during the late 1940s, wrote: "Lord, Thou has asked me to love my neighbors and friends as I love myself. That would be a lot of loving, Lord, give me the courage to go to, a friend against whom I hold a grudge and say, 'I am sorry, forgive me'."

At a kindergarten Christmas party there was a play. Four little angels held golden glittering letters which spelled out, "STAR." Unfortunately, like many of us, they came out on the stage in reverse. In this order it really doesn't spell out the Christmas message does it?

Meals on Wheels needs volunteers

DRIVERS AND other volunteers are need to deliver 250 meals daily to shut-ins and the handicapped on the peninsula for Meals on Wheels.

According to Chuck Poland, a Carmel volunteer, 280 homes are served with three meals five days a week from Carmel Valley to Marina, but 25 volunteer drivers are needed daily to deliver those meals.

Each shut-in is delivered a breakfast, one cold meal (usually a sandwich, salad and juice), and one hot meal. He added that volunteers are also needed to prepare meals at the Meals on Wheels facility at 700 Jewell Ave. in Pacific Grove.

The agency also serves lunch to about 75 seniors at the facility every day. If you would like to volunteer to help out, contact Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

Meals on Wheels is a non-profit organization.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

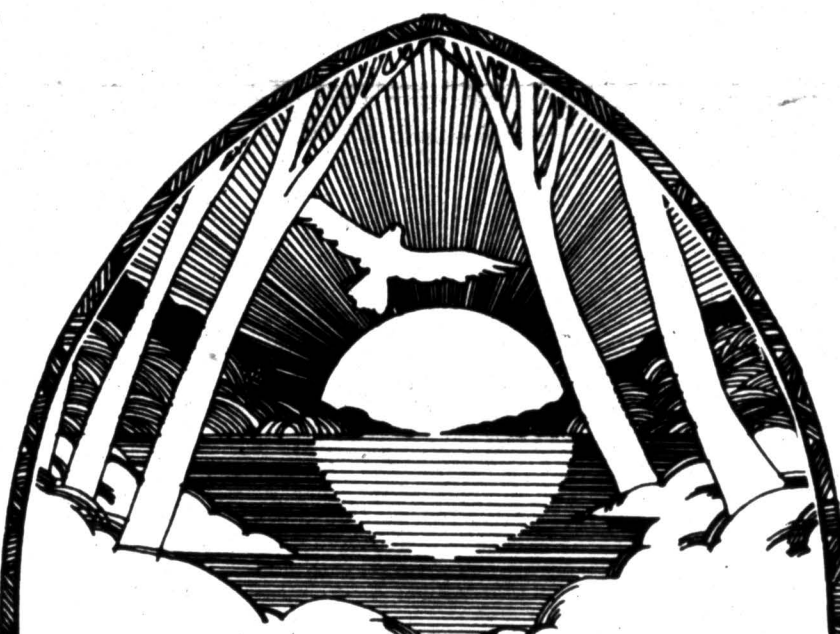

Maintaining close friendships can be beneficial to your health. That is the conclusion of several studies carried out by healthcare professionals. One of the latest studies, by Duke University Medical Center researchers, found that heart patients without a spouse or close friend were three times as likely to die within five years of diagnosis as those who had a spouse or close friend. The researchers reported: "A support group may be as effective as costly medical treatment. Simply put, having someone to talk to is very powerful medicine."

Stephen Schattman, 96, and Sylvia Herman, 82, now have each other to talk to — all day, every day. The two first met in 1937. But they married others. Recently they found that each had been widowed. Schattman subsequently produced an engagement ring, and the two were married in New York.

Mother Mary inspired surprising mix of poets

By JOHN DETRO

SURELY IT shan't be seen as disrespectful if one observes that The Creator appears to like big surprises.

Evidence, as the slick authors say, abounds.

The Nazareth of biblical times, for example, stood just about equivalent to today's Burbank when occasions rose for folks to make small jokes. Paraphrasing one of the New Testament's would-be comics: What of any value every arrived from Nazareth?

As Christmas draws near, we're well aware that tiny dusty Nazareth gave the world mind-blowing matters in the shape of an itinerant teacher. His bucolic followers (and later all Christians) came to know this dusky carpenter as the Son of God.

What an announcement

Another surprise: his mother. Commentators within my reading experience agree that Mary was probably 15 or even 14 when — as Luke writes in the Good Book — the Angel Gabriel entered her room and announced she'd birth the one to be called Emmanuel.

"I know not man," she reportedly said. "How shall this be done?"

"...the power of the most High shall overshadow thee."

So it was a very young country girl from a nowhere town who spoke the stunning fiat: "Behold the handmaid of the Lord — be it done to me according to thy word."

The free assent of Mary, so direct and seemingly small when stacked against the patriarchal intellectualism of her homeland, meant that our planet would never be the same. Now that's a surprise.

Imaginations ignited

It's equally true that the Christ's mother has ignited the imaginations of bards in many different nations and centuries: from pagan Sicily to poet-priest Dan Berrigan's Manhattan writing table. One needn't be a Catholic to respect her impact on global literature. Mary — surprise — has stirred the wildly committed playboy and the criminal as well as saintly scribes.

Why?

"From the point of view of consequence," Berrigan wrote in his collection of modern parables, "there are no more perilous, incendiary words in all history than the simple 'I choose you' of the divine."

And from an essay by the late poet-monk Thomas Merton: "Sophia, the feminine child, is playing in the world obvious and unseen, playing at all times before the Creator. Her delights are to be with the children of men. Sophia is gift, is Spirit. Now the Blessed Virgin Mary is the one created being who enacts and shows forth in her life all that is hidden in Sophia. Through her wise answer, through the sweet yielding consent of Sophia, God enters without publicity into the city of rapacious men."

Much research

A Wisconsin nun named Sister M. Therese undertook research of staggering scope. She collected Mary-based verse from ancient times up until the months right after World War Two. Her labors became an anthology — I Sing of a Maiden — which was published in 1947.

Sister Therese discovered that Publius Vengilius Maro (70-19 BC) had rendered his own version of the prophecy of a visionary woman. Translated from the Latin by Thomas Walsh:

Muses of Sicily, loftier our song!

For now we reach the final epoch foretold by Cumae's Sibyl;

A new cycle among the ages comes to birth;

The virgin, Astraea, returns; the Saturnian age of peace is renewed,

For a new order of generation is sent down from the high heavens!

Thou, chaste Lucina, be propitious to the boy newborn,

Through whom the Iron Age will reach its end

And the Golden Age will spread over the entire world....

Litany recalled

Saint Ephrem (310-373) wrote: "Still a maid and still a mother, / What is there we may not call her?" Fifth century poet Caelius Sedulius: "Hail, Maiden Root! whence lithely mounts a kingly Flowering, / That since our time unwound has petaled world and heaven with spring...."

And this anonymous Gaelic litany to Our Lady dates from 750 or so:

O Beauty of Virgins.

O Mother of Orphans.

O Breast of the Infants.

O Star of the Sea.

O Mother of Christ.

O Resort of the Lord.

O Graceful like the Dove.

O Serene like the Moon.

O Resplendent like the Sun.

O Ladder of Heaven.

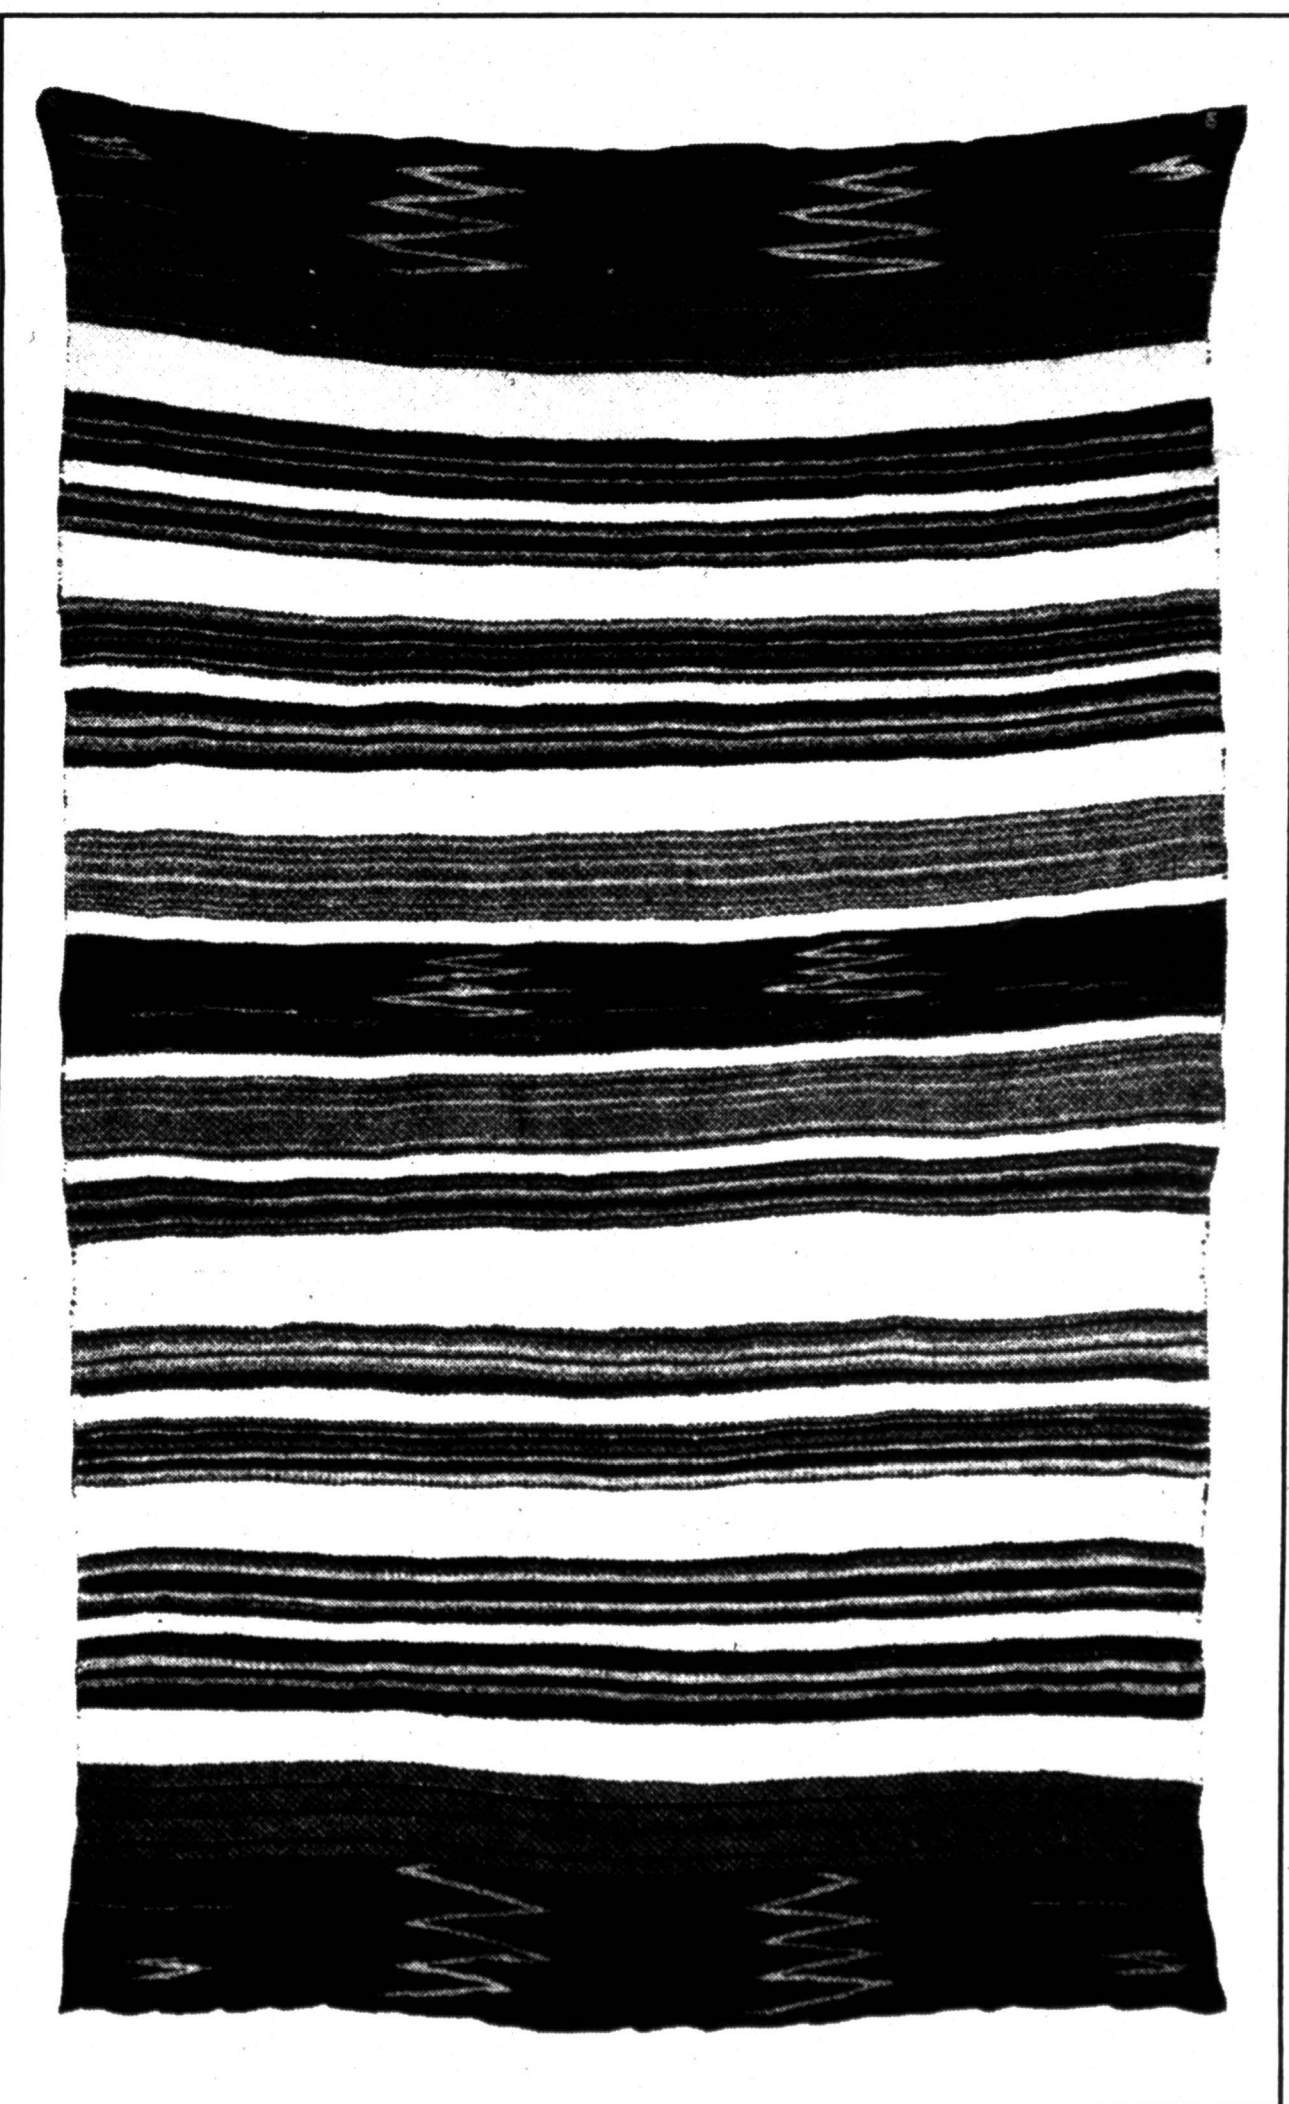

No shock

It's no shock that such theologically-adept poets as Dante, Milton, John Donne, Gerard Manley Hopkins, Francis Thompson and Eliot would devote shimmering work

Random acts of beauty...

THERE'S AN admirable individual (or group?) posting anonymous poetry throughout the area. The name adopted: Random Acts.

Check the nearest public bulletin board and you may encounter the sudden and often-changing goodies. Here's a recent offering with the drawing accompanying it:

There be these things which serene me:
The gentle rippling of water,
The supple washing of a cat,
A woman singing in the house,
My frosted breath against the stars.

Still water plashing,
A cat on my lap,
A woman singing,
Breath against the stars.

These things content me
With quiet wonder.

It Could Be Verse: his version of a classic

By BILL PENTONY

THE SPIRIT of Christmas somehow manages to wade through the muddy tides of commercialism that rise higher each year on the shores of our sensibilities.

So, knowing that the same magic will surface a day or two before Christmas and all the joys of the season will manifest, I would like to offer my version of two Christmas standards, with apologies to their originators.

The Night Before Christmas

'Twas the night before Christmas but the rest of it's hazy.

We were sipping on eggnog and dancing like crazy.

When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter

I sprang from my chair to see what was the matter.

The moon through the trees lit the scenery below

I could see in the distance a faint bluish glow,

And what to my wondering eyes should appear

But a shiny gold space ship that landed quite near,

And out jumped a creature so lively and quick

I knew in an instant it wasn't St. Nick.

He was thin as a rail and his features were skimpy,

And he hobbled around on a leg that was gimpy.

I offered him eggnog and he drank it right down

Then leapt in his space ship and circled the town.

But I heard him exclaim 'ere he roared out of sight,

"Merry Christmas to all and to all a good night!"

And this one, sung to the tune of, God Bless You, Merry Gentlemen.

Be careful Little Pussycat when you go out to play.

Remember cars are dangerous when you get in their way.

And dogs that bark may also bite And chase you up a tree.

So be careful when you go out to play. Have a nice day.

So be careful when you go out to play.

Rainy night couldn't dampen Harrell artistry

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

EVEN THOUGH cellist Lynn Harrell said "my catgut doesn't like the rain," and he had to retune his instrument more frequently than usual due to the dampness of the Carmel evening, his concert was a triumph. Pianist Brooke Smith was a superior collaborator and major factor in this result.

The Carmel Music Society again sustained the high quality of programming our local audience trusts them to provide. The intimate confines of Sunset Auditorium, where one is physically close to the performers, is an ideal venue for this essentially chamber music presentation.

The program seemed to me to be shaped like a pyramid, where the choice of repertoire broadened and deepened as it proceeded. Certainly the Bach Sonata No. 2 in D Major for Viola da Gamba and Continuo was up at the slender point.

Equal parts

Harrell and Smith were a duo who, in equal parts, created the delicate yet elegant atmosphere this transcription of music for bye-gone instruments demanded.

The opening Adagio was small scale yet sweet toned. The Allegro danced with a light hearted charm. The Arioso-like Andante featured fine touch and well proportioned tone as its long lined discursive phrases went by. A jaunty, happy finale was outlined by the agile fingered cellist and pianist employing small scaled refined dynamics as if recalling the original scoring.

In the Brahms Sonata No. 2 in F Major Op. 99, cellist Lynn Harrell definitively revealed himself as a master of nuance.

This work is developmentally in the central section of my musical pyramid.

Controlled conviction

The interpretive slant here was towards controlled conviction rather than a broad brushed sweeping romantic gesture. The more thoughtful the passage, the more lyrical and warm the tone.

Harrell and Smith were poetically declarative rather than fiery. The playing was technically of the finest and tonally the music sang richly yet gently.

The Adagio was conceived with a vocal accent in warm depths of cello tone. The players' sensitivity came close to being ethereal at times.

The large scaled Scherzo with its contrasting sections was masterfully rendered. There was easily encompassed, spirited virtuosity and a smoothly melodic trio section. The Finale was another elegantly presented movement.

Excellent balance

The piano and cello were always in excellent balance and the communicative character of the music was made very clear.

The work which was the foundation of my figurative pyramid was also the high point of the program.

The Rachmaninov Sonata in G minor for Cello and Piano Op. 19, one of Rachmaninov's few chamber works and one of the few successful compositions in this genre by a Russian composer, was written concurrently with his world renowned Piano Concerto no.2 and there are strong familial resemblances between the works. The piano part of the Sonata makes as many superhuman demands on the pianist as the concerto does.

Smith displayed a distinguished and unfailing virtuosity which surmounted all problems with effortless command and finesse. The unrelenting planism of the music which required non-stop major exertion for over half an hour, was closely matched by the demands on the cellist.

Harrell was required to exploit his deep resources of tone and technical mastery as well. There were depths of expression and communication rather than monumentally built passions and I liked it better this way.

There was a scintillating Scherzo which contained contrast of warm toned lyricism as well. We heard Schubertian voicings in the Andante which underlined the musicians sensitive artistry.

Always one heard nuance, refinement and controlled intensity. In response to the enthusiastic audience reception, three encores were performed.

The Chopin Nocturne in C# Minor was played with lovely singing tone in the cello and remarkably delicate piano tone.

Schubert's An di Musik was full of ethereal grace, and Francoeur's Presto Presto was a humorous but fiendishly difficult show piece for both instruments, ending the evening with a smile.

Society will offer a world class mezzo-soprano

SPOKESPERSONS FOR the music scene looked beyond year's end this week and announced events occurring in January.

Carmel Music Society will bring world class mezzo-soprano Frederica von Stade and pianist Martin Katz to the Sunset Center stage at 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 8.

"Single tickets cost $50 apiece and are going fast," it was reported by Dixie Calder, "but they still may be bought in advance by calling 625-9938. Those not purchased will be available at the door the evening of the performance."

One major critic said of Frederica: "Her singing was polished, yet warm, like china under whose thin glaze are painted scenes of extraordinary delicacy."

Von Stade began at the top when she got a contract from Sir Rudolf Bing during the Metropolitan Opera auditions in 1970. She has made more than three dozen recordings for major labels.

Katz is a native of Los Angeles where he began music studies at age five. A reviewer called him "the Rolls Royce of pianist partners."

The Sunset Center program will feature old and new music by such composers as Respighi, Puccini, Ginastera, Strauss, Satie, Poulenc, others.

CHILDREN'S ENTERTAINER Linda

Arnold will take the Sunset Center stage with her band at 2 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 3.

Last year she performed for an audience of more than 700 children and adults. Thunderbird For Kids (bookshop in The Barnyard) presents her again.

Tickets are available there at $5 each. Information: 624-4995.

In addition to four recordings, Arnold has released a video tape described as "a magical storybook concert for children."

A theater major at UC/Santa Cruz, Arnold developed her stagecraft first and later, when she had youngsters, began to compose music and sing with them as they grew up.

"Her stage show," says news source Beth Peerless, "involved colorful props and puppets and great catchy tunes that keep children's attention and allow them to join in.

No cost

WESTWIND INTERNATIONAL Folk Ensemble will sing and dance its way around the world at Santa Catalina School Performing Arts Center at 8 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 16.

Admission to the offering is free. Details: 655-9341.

Formed in 1959, the San Francisco group includes a folk chorus, dance troupe and band. Their repertoire includes a variety of traditional music and dance, including English sword dances, Irish reels, Croatian forms, Appalachian clogging and American Shaker worship dances.

Chorus stars in Yule concert

By LYN BRONSON

I ONCE had the privilege of hearing the distinguished choral conductor Howard Swan in a rehearsal, just before the soloists and orchestra came together for the final dress rehearsal.

When the rehearsal was over he loosened his tie, sat back in his chair, and began to speak to them. He said that he most enjoyed working with the amateurs who comprise so many choruses.

Genuine love

It was more satisfying to him because the unpaid members of the chorus were motivated by a genuine love of the music they were performing whereas the soloists were being paid and the orchestra received scale. For them it was often a "gig," as musicians are so fond of saying.

Swan complimented the chorus on the way they were stimulated by the music they were singing and predicted that in the final performance they would react to the special feeling of the occasion by delivering even more concentration and intensity than they had in rehearsals.

I watched the faces of members of the chorus during this speech and observed the rapt attention and devotion they gave this man. And sure enough, the final performance was a knockout, with everything the chorus did being a little more intense and a little more spontaneous.

Same kind of feeling

I had just this kind of feeling observing the Christmas concert of I Cantori di Carmel in collaboration with the Monterey Bay Symphony under the direction of Sal Ferrantelli at the Camel Mission Basilica.

The program consisted of Schubert's Standchen, Pergolesi's Magnificat a Quattro Voci, selections from Saint-Saens' Christmas Oratorio and Mozart's Missa Brevis in F, K 192.

The real star of the evening was the chorus. They sang with an intensity, precision and abandon which made the spirits soar. As I watched the many faces of the chorus members, I wondered who these people were, what they did for a living and how they came by the skill which they displayed so magnificently during this joyous evening.

We heard glorious precision in imitative entrances between sections of the chorus, a beautiful control of dynamics and excellent delineation of every melisma. Bravo to the chorus!

Sounded like 30

The Monterey Bay Chamber Orchestra, with David Dally acting as Concertmaster, consisted of only 10 musicians, but they sounded like 30. Pauline Thomas augmented the ensemble with some agile organ playing, and Mark Takeuchi, bassist, was heard at one moment plucking some pizzicato low notes with such exact placement and precision it was magical.

Soprano Susan Roe delivered excellent solid performances in a strong, clear voice during the Pergolesi and the Mozart.

Mezzo-soprano Linda Purdy, looking regal and stunning in her royal red gown, treated us to a sensitive and moving performance of Schubert's Lied for alto voice and male chorus, Standchen.

Strength

Tenor Del Silva and Baritone David Cox also contributed much to the evening's success with their strong performances and excellent sense of ensemble in their collaboration in the Pergolesi and Mozart.

Sal Ferrantelli, Conductor of I Cantori di Carmel, truly deserves a lot of credit, not only for how beautifully this concert was put together (and you do not want to know the logistical nightmares he probably has to contend with), but also for the splendid way he has been able to develop this group into such an artistically satisfying entity during the past 10 years.

He has obviously collected, trained and motivated these singers to an extraordinary degree and I Cantori can hold its own with any ensemble of comparable size.

McNamara joins series

HE WAS police chief in San Jose, the only Harvard PhD to become top cop of a major American city, the only police chief to qualify as a best-selling mystery writer.

He's Joseph McNamara. And it was announced this week that he will appear at Carmel's Harrison Memorial Library on Friday, Jan. 22, in the facility's Authors-by-the-Sea Series.

Library staffers suggest that tickets would make the perfect holiday gift for the readers on each list. They sell for $12 apiece and are available at the Harrison Memorial circulation desk.

The event will start at 8 p.m. in the library reading room. Refreshments will be served after the question-and-answer period.

Series proceeds go to buy books for the library. Information: 624-4629.

Spiritual discussions offered

On the first Sunday of every month there will be an offering by St. Philip's Lutheran Church of music by Pat Mahoney's group "Homefire" along with discussion and spiritual exploration especially for persons who are not currently attending church. It will be held in the church sanctuary at 8065 Carmel Valley Rd. in Carmel Valley at 7 p.m. For more information call 624-6765.

KAZU Radio plans Christmas shows

SPECIAL CHRISTMAS programming has been scheduled by KAZU Public Radio (90.3FM).

Its studios in Pacific Grove, KAZU will offer Christmas Fireside Stories "on and off throughout Christmas Eve and Christmas Day," says Program Director Peter Williams.

The traditional and "not so traditional" tales will be read by local actors, political personalities and KAZU staffers.

Taelen Thomas will read Good King Wenceslas with harp accompaniment by Amy Krupski.

Assemblyman Sam Farr will read The Night Before Christmas.

Other readers include Pat McAnaney of KAZU, Pacific Grove Mayor Jeannie Byrne, Seaside Mayor Lance McLair, Anne Mattingly, Leslie Shill, John Dotson, Scott Fogelson, Kedron Bryson "and many others."

Additionally, Leos Janacek's Jenufa will be broadcast live from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House — for the first time since January 1986 — on Saturday, Dec. 26. It will be heard over KAZU starting at 10:30 a.m.

Gabriela Benackova will sing the title role with Leonie Rysanek as Kostelnicka and James Conlon conducting.

During the first intermission, American playwright Albert Innaurato will discuss the work and its composer.

BOOKS, ETC.

Book Bag

By John Detro

Walter's graceful way

Shards: Restoring the Shattered Spirit. By Walter Cooper. Health Communications, Inc., Deerfield Beach, Florida. 240 pages. $12 in paperback.

THESE DAYS, we are surrounded by prophets as strident as they are false. Dingbats, corporate flacks, cultic money-grubbers, exhausted and exhausting clerics — so many pretenders seek to convince us that they know the one essential Road Map.

It's sheer joy, then, when the reader meets a clear and gentle soul who simply shares what has been found along his/her own path. Santa Fe artist Walter Cooper doesn't proffer total and tortured answers; he simply writes down refulgent observations and hands them over along with his drawings of ancient petroglyphs carved on canyons and cave walls by the prehistoric Anasazi Indians.

Manhattan madness

Cooper took urban pressure while working as a copywriter and art director for a major advertising agency in New York and Tokyo. The early 1970s found him burnt-out. He chose New Mexico and began working with silk-screen printing and then the paints and brushes.

Inspired by shards — bits of pottery from the vast Galisteo basin — Cooper considers the healing powers of nature and the choices each person can make to change the journey's direction.

"Why do they fascinate me so, these curious tokens of the past?" he asks. "Is it because I, too, need to establish a spirit line, a meaningful connection with something primeval, organic and whole? Again and again I am drawn to these random bits of clay as if they were clues to the source of my own well-being."

Samples

Gradually he lets go "suffocating beliefs imposed by others." And we get brief takes on one man's trek toward peace of heart and mind:

- "Competition is manipulation. I want no part of it. Instead of comparing myself to others, I'd rather become transparent, stay out of my own way and allow the splendor which created me to shine through"
- "Ideas are like bees looking for the right flower to land on. If you want ideas to find you, be still and vulnerable as the meadow wildflowers and soon the bees will come."
- "There are angels on the streets of Espanola. Albuquerque too! Angels abound but they're invisible to all but the very young and the very old. My brother, Joe became childhood chums with a pair of cherubs called Aard and Seneca... Today's winged messengers, guardians and guides prefer more contemporary names like Fred, Bep, Barbara and Doug. They continue, however, to cover us with their feathers and brush our lives in gentle and profound ways."
- "From where does this flaky notion come that says children need to be molded and pummeled into shape? That children are raw dough waiting for an adult to give them form and definition? Isn't it the adult who is fragmented, and the infant, fresh from God, who is complete? Can we recognize our children for the innate geniuses they are?..."
- "Occasionally a soothing air would pass by the stifled rooms of childhood hinting of a spirit line which courses through all creation."
- "If we examine each of our 'sacred cows,' we might just see how many 'shoulds' it takes to keep them all in clover."
- "...Religious beliefs and rigid social behavior have strait-jacketed generations with solemn and fearful legacies. Countless souls have been woefully misled as to the true nature of their being. We are creatures of sunlight, not sin. Lives needn't be guilty or cheerless or gray. Our natural state is joy!"
- "I'm no writer, I'm a Pack Rat. A scavenger collecting bits and pieces from the rubble of other landscapes. An information-gatherer salvaging particles from our dimly remembered childhood. I would like to offer you the leanest remnants of another possibility. I would like to write one sentence which makes sense to a world in pain...."

Walter Cooper's wish comes true. Herein, he carves out a great many sentences which make a great deal of sense.

GroveMont revives musical comedy

THE MUSICAL comedy Nunsense will return to GroveMont Theater's Monterey Playhouse over the New Year's weekend, it was announced.

Cited were four nights — Thursday, Dec. 31, through Sunday, Jan. 3, with one matinee at 2 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 2.

Nunsense had a successful 14-week run at the same showcase earlier this year. "It proved to be our most successful show ever," says GroveMont founder Stephen Moor, who directed. "This will be the public's last chance to see it in Monterey."

Featured will be the original cast: Rosanna Yadegari as Sister Mary Regina, Amy Washburn as Sister Hubert, Jeanne Wooster as Sister Robert Anne, Eleanor Wyde as Sister Mary Amnesia and Jessica Ann Stevenson as Sister Mary Leo.

The New Year's Eve tickets ($45 per person) cover pre-show wine, beer and hors d'oeuvres, free drinks at intermission, champagne buffet dinner after the show.

For reservations and other ticket prices, call 649-6852 or 655-PLAY.

FOREST THEATER Guild makes known the appointment of Hamish Tyler as president for the 1993 season.

Joining him will be Vice-President Linda Purdy, Secretary Joe Styne, Treasurer Craig Clymo.

According to the official announcement, Cole Weston (1992 Guild president) "will step down as president to become director emeritus in honor of his 45 years with Forest Theater."

Tyler is the head of radio and drama at Robert Louis Stevenson School. He has been associated with Forest Theater since 1981, serving as president and a director responsible for memorable productions.

CHOREOGRAPHER AND dancer Melissa Fenley will offer a program of her solo works at UC/Santa Cruz's Performing Arts Theater on Saturday, Jan. 9, the Arts and Lectures Series spokespersons said this week.

Her appearance will kick off the winter quarter of programming.

"Fenley strips away much of what we have come to expect from solo dance," one critic wrote. "Her works are stark, meditative."

Santa Catalina School will host Children of the World Paint in a Single Language.

This international exhibit of children's art will open Jan. 9 and continue through Feb. 14 in the gallery of Sister Kieran Memorial Library.

On display will be 70 pieces by artists ranging in age from 4-16 years from 37 countries. The works are organized around themes: War and Peace, Festivals and Dance, Family and Friends, Sports and Play, Animals, Portraits, People at Work.

The exhibit originates from the permanent collection of Paintbrush Diplomacy, an international children's art and letter exchange program based in the San Francisco Bay Area. Right now, more than 10,000 youngsters — half from the United States and half from 70 other nations — participate in the adventure.

Photos shown

BLACK AND white photography by localite Loren List will make up the January exhibit at Carmel Valley Manor Hallway Gallery.

Word on this show comes from Manor Art Chairman Bill Stanley. The facility (at 8545 Carmel Valley Rd.) is open from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. daily.

Annie's vision

THE ANSEL Adams Center in San Francisco announces a coup — an exhibit of photographs by Annie Leibovitz. It will run from Jan. 27 of next year through March 14.

This will cover the 20-year career of Leibovitz. Included will be portraits of John Lennon, Ella Fitzgerald, Whoopi Goldberg plus early black-and-white essays on the Rolling Stones and President Nixon's resignation.

Says Chief Curator Andy Grundberg: "We are pleased and proud to be the first museum on the West Coast to present this comprehensive exhibition of Annie's work. It is an amazing and captivating display of the power of portraiture."

Organized by New York City's International Center of Photography in conjunction with the Smithsonian National Portrait Gallery, the show and tour are made possible by American Express.

"Annie's style is an uncanny amalgam of humor, curiosity and compassion," says Grundberg. "She has created some of the most vivid, instantly known portraits of the day, such as Bette Midler covered in roses or Dan Aykroyd and John Belushi as The Blues Brothers. Her works have helped shape and define the look of American popular culture."

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

Johnny's version

AS PROMISED last week, we now present the jazz all-star selections of disc jockey Johnny Adams from KRML Radio in Carmel.

It was Johnny who inspired this whole notion when he dared yours truly to make some tough choices and compile such a roster.

We called our crew God's Dream Band. Adams submitted The Ultimate Jazz Orchestra in the Skies Above—

Leader: Stan Kenton. Co-leader: Gil Evans.

Trumpets: Miles Davis, Clifford Brown, Chet Baker, Thad Jones, Don Ellis.

Saxophones: Coleman Hawkins, Lester Young, Zoot Sims, Paul Gonsalves (tenors). Charlie Parker, Julian Adderley, Paul Desmond (altos). Art Pepper (clarinet). Serge Chaloff, Harry Carney (baritones).

Trombones: Frank Rosolino, Kai Winding, Jack Teagarden, Jimmy Cleveland.

Bass clarinet: Eric Dolphy.

Vibes: Cal Tjader.

Bass: Charles Mingus, Wendell Marshall.

Piano: Bill Evans, Bud Powell.

Vocals: Jay Johnson, Billie Holiday, Honeydewers.

Drums: Buddy Rich, Sonny Payne.

Latin percussion: Tito Puente, Machito.

Arrangers: Oliver Nelson, Tadd Dameron.

Guitar: Wes Montgomery.

Composer: Count Basie, Duke Ellington.

If you have picks, send them along to this column. Johnny says he'll organize "Independent Judges" and award prizes for "the most thoughtful entries."

AS YOU ponder New Year's Eve activities, remember that fine bop guitarist Bruce Forman will be at Cafe Casa in downtown Monterey with the house regulars: Jackie Coon (flugelhorn), Dottie Dodgion (drums and vocals), Buddy Jones (bass).

"The (Casa Munras) hotel has a pretty great holiday package," says Dottie. "People can come party and not worry about driving home."

Meanwhile, the Monterey Marriott announces that a ballroom will be transformed into Manhattan's Times Square for Thursday, Dec. 31.

"Spang-a-lang will play for dancing," says spokesperson Tia Gindick. "King Kong will tower over the cityscape. And the buffet will pay tribute to such New York landmarks as Little Italy, Chinatown, Carnegie Deli and Fulton Fishmarket."

Co-sponsored by Radio Pacific, the party will run from 8 p.m. until 1 a.m. The price includes complimentary drinks, party favors and a chance to win round-trip tickets for two to Puerto Vallarta with accommodations at the Marriott Casa Magna.

Call 649-4234 for cost and information on the even bigger Celebration Package.

THE LATE jazz critic Ralph Gleason helped develop Monterey Jazz Festival. He also put together superb columns and TV interviews with various giants.

Now, son Toby Gleason says material from the Ralph-produced collection of Jazz Casual Productions has been "set for distribution."

The company has entered into an agreement with Atlantic/Rhino allowing use of an audio segment of Ralph's interview with John Coltrane on an upcoming CD reissue.

An episode of Ralph's 1960s TV show, featuring the Coltrane Quartet, was screened during the recent San Francisco Jazz Festival's Trane Tribute Night.

THE CATALYST in Santa Cruz spotlights the Neville Brothers on Monday night, Dec. 28. Next evening: Los Lobos. Call 425-7799.

Mary of Nazareth inspired surprising mix of poets

to Mary. However, the Christ-bearing teenager also entered the lives of some rather unlikely writers. (For the sake of wider representation, only small portions of poems are offered here.)

Samuel Taylor Coleridge (1772-1834) was a vicar's son who became addicted to opium. In one poem he says the shepherds told Mary of "a glorious light" and "Blest angels" heralding the Child's birth. And—

*She listened to the tale devine,
And closer still the Babe she pressed;
And while she cried, the Babe is mine!
The milk rushed faster to her breast:
Joy rose within her, like a summer's morn....*

Party type

Lord Byron (1788-1824). Womanizer who partied hard, a political revolutionary as well as great poet, he fled England for Switzerland and then Italy after scandal broke his marriage. He addressed Mary thus:

*Veiled Glory of this lampless Universe!
Thou Moon beyond the clouds! Thou living form
Among the Dead! Thou Star above the Storm!*

Disorderly

Francois Villon (1432-1485). "His life was disorderly in the extreme," says a biographical blurb, "and thrice he was under arrest for grave violations of the law."

Villon might have been hanged for burglary. Instead, he was banished. Prison life followed, and ribaldry in the Paris slums. But, still, these lines:

*Lady of Heaven and earth...
...all mine undeserving may not mar*

*Such mercies as thy sovereign mercies are;
Without the which (as true words testify)
No soul can reach thy Heaven so fair and far.
Even in this faith I choose to live and die.
Unto thy Son say thou that I am His.
And to me graceless make Him gracious.*

Convicted

Oscar Wilde (1856-1900). Following a widely-publicized trial in London, he was convicted of immorality and imprisoned. Later he fled to France, dying there. He wrote of and to Mary:

*And now with wondering eyes and heart I stand
Before this supreme mystery of love:
Some kneeling girl...
An angel with a lily in his hand,
And over both the white wings of a Dove.*

Brooding boozier

Edgar Allen Poe (1809-1849). A brooding alcoholic, the writer often slept in the gutters of Baltimore. Yet, there was something about her, something—

*At morn, at noon, at twilight dim,
Maria, thou hast heard my hymn:
In joy and woe, in good and ill,
Mother of God, be with me still.*

Sharp wit

Thomas Merton says Mary acted "in sadness and joy, with the full awareness of what she (was) doing." Full awareness. The phrase makes doubly poignant the lines written about "the gentlest lady" by — surprise— Dorothy Parker.

During the 1920s and '30s in New York, Parker worked as a drama and book critic, becoming famous for her acidic wit. Even such seasoned writers as Robert Benchley and Heywood Brown were afraid of her verbal assaults. On quite another hand, she wrote about Mary:

*They say upon His birthday eve
She'd rock Him to His rest
As if she could not have Him leave
The shelter of her breast.*

*The poor must go in bitter thrift,
The poor must grieve in pain,
But ever did she set a gift
To greet His day again.*

*They say she'd kiss the boy awake,
And hail Him gay and clear,
But oh, her heart was like to break
To count another year.*

Simplicity

Well, mystery's never served by purplish, bloated prose. Mary and her fiat go forth in utter simplicity. This thrilling simplicity — uncluttered love — may well be what we feel on Christmas Eve.

John Lynch wrote an epic, book-length poem about The Birth. In his words, the radiant mystery comes down to:

*This is God's chosen way with men,
To take men's way; and so the streets she walks
And all the roads...a woman plain
Upon the earth, and in her arms, a Child.*

Give Monterey County First!!

The SPCA of Monterey County is not affiliated with, or controlled by, a statewide or national SPCA. THERE IS NO NATIONAL SPCA! We are a local non-profit, tax-exempt organization, incorporated in 1905 in the state of California. We are governed by a Board of Directors (unpaid) who are elected by the membership. If you make a financial contribution to any other animal welfare group, we do not receive a share. We depend upon donations for our funding. We do not receive any Federal, State, County or City funds. We do receive reimbursements from the agencies that use our facilities to house their stray animals. All of our wildlife rescue and rehabilitation is funded strictly by donations. We have humane officers on duty 24 hours a day to do the rescues of animals in Monterey County. We have a low-cost spay/neuter clinic that is supported by donations. We have many funds for people who cannot afford to spay or neuter and special funds to help injured stray domestic animals. We also have an ongoing educational program for the youth of Monterey County. All of these programs are funded by donations. So, think locally this year, and give to help the animals of Monterey County!
